Independent North China Is Demanded Of Nanking

Central Regime Has Lost Interest in Provinces, Leader Asserts.

Japanese Retain Railroad Control

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Tientsin, (Monday), June 1.—Chairman Li Ting-Yu, of the "People's Autonomous Association of the Republic of China," today telegraphed Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, representative of the Nanking government, demanding that North China immediately declare complete autonomy.

British officials here believed the telegram was the first overt move toward a declaration of independence by the five North China provinces, with a population of more than 100,000,000 people, and that it presages a regime in the north under the domination of the Japanese army.

Li is a member of the Hopei-Chahar Political Council, of which Gen. Sung is chairman. Sung, it was understood, has been in conference throughout the week-end in Peiping with representatives of the Japanese army.

The central government in Nanking long ago abandoned all interest in North China, Li's telegram asserted, adding that "it is time you carried out our plan for autonomy which too long has been held in abeyance."

Li's telegram followed conversations yesterday between the Chinese official and Maj. Gen. Matsumuro, who succeeded Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara as chief political agent of the Japanese army in North China. Doihara was reported to be in Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo.

Troops in Control.

Unconfirmed reports were circulated by Chinese that Japanese military authorities have given Sung Cheh-Yaun until midnight Friday to define his attitude toward North China independence.

Meanwhile, Japanese troops continued in full control of the railway line from Shanhaikwan, entrance to Manchukuo, through Tientsin to Peiping. All important stations were occupied. The section of the line between Tientsin and its down-river port, Tangku, damaged Saturday by bomb explosions, was repaired quickly.

Student demonstrations here and in Peiping were suppressed. Reinforcements were sent to Peiping to help guard the big compound of the Japanese embassy in the legation quarter. Japanese airplanes were active as far south as the Yellow River.

Chinese attributed the greatest importance to the railway bombings, recalling that it was the bombing of the tracks of the Japanese-owned south Manchuria railway, near Mukden, in September, 1931, which led to establishment of the independent empire of Manchukuo by the Japanese army.

Japanese said the damage to the railway was done by Chinese agents who hoped to prevent Japanese troop movements. Japan has the right to patrol the railway under terms of the Boxer protocols.

Arson Suspected In 35th St. Blaze

A fire believed to have been of incendiary origin last night damaged the basement of the home at 3714 Thirty-fifth street northwest. Rossa F. Downing, local attorney and occupant of the house, estimated damage at $2,000.

Police last night were looking for a Negro suspected of having set the blaze. He is believed to have been motivated by a desire for revenge on Downing and on the Downing maid, Mary Taylor, 48, Negro.

Downing said that the man had been friendly with Miss Taylor for some time, but that a year ago he had been forbidden to enter the house, where Miss Taylor lived in a basement room. Recently, it was said, the man had quarreled with Miss Taylor.

Downing, returning home late last night, found his house on fire. He learned from neighbors that a Negro had been seen throwing lighted sticks of kindling through his basement window.

Caffery Flies Here Today From Cuba

By the United Press.

Havana, Cuba, May 31.—Rumors of internal difficulties in Cuba grew pronounced today, when United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery announced suddenly that he would fly to Washington tomorrow.

It was recalled that Caffery has made several previous hurried trips to Washington when serious political crises threatened. It was believed possible he may have been summoned to explain the budget situation, which has become a stormy subject in government circles.

The newspaper El Mundo said today that "representatives of powerful foreign firms" had opened preliminary negotiations with the Cuban government for a huge loan to consolidate foreign and internal indebtedness and to provide new funds for public works.

Zioncheck Hunts His Bride; Kin to Show Him 'Real Speed'

Long Search Is Futile; Wife Reported to Be With Friends.

Father-in-Law Promises Him Truck Ride on Texarkana Street.

Drawn and haggard from the strain of two sleepless nights and several week-end tussles with neighbors and police, Representative Marion A. Zioncheck wandered about the city yesterday searching for the 20-year-old PWA stenographer he married a month ago.

Distraught with the anxiety of not having seen her for more than 36 hours, the 35-year-old "wild man" Representative from Seattle broke into the apartments of his neighbors in Harvard Hall, scoured the local hotels and visited the homes of several of his wife's friends.

At 5 o'clock, after a fruitless 16-hour search in which he repeatedly vowed he would "go to the bottom of the ocean" to find his wife, he returned to his apartment and sank down on the bed, sighing wearily.

"I'm going to get some sleep."

Less than two hours later, however, he was gone from his apartment, searching the city anew.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Zioncheck, who left her husband Saturday afternoon following the minor riot at

T. M. Nix, farmer, whose daughter, Rubye, was married to the Seattle Representative recently after a whirlwind courtship, confided today he was stopped recently for speeding and promised he would "show Marion some real speed in my 1926 model car when he visits us here after Congress gets through."

He added, however, that his son-in-law's antics are becoming slightly embarrassing to the family.

"I think," he said cautiously, "they ought to slow down a little. As father of his wife, it's getting to be a little embarrassing to us."

Mr. and Mrs. Nix had not heard of yesterday's developments in the Zioncheck career, climaxed last night when the Representative was arrested after neighbors living near his apartment in Washington re-

Pope, 79, Warns World Against Reds' Doctrine

40,000 Pilgrims Attend in St. Peter's to Honor Pontiff's Birthday.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, May 31.—Pope Pius XI observed his seventy-ninth birthday today by strongly renouncing communism and its "false prophets."

The Pontiff, who is the oldest ruler in Europe or Asia, after receiving the salutes of Catholic delegates from 22 nations, told them:

"Above all, guard yourselves against the dangers and insidiousness of communism, against those who are false prophets, dreaming of an impossible union—a union of truth with falsehood."

A solemn mass in celebration of the birthday was celebrated in St. Peter's, attended by 40,000 pilgrims who came here especially for the occasion from throughout the world.

The Pontiff spoke for 55 minutes in Latin to members of the Catholic Action groups whose organizations he has stimulated from Buenos Aires to Quebec, and from Dublin to Shanghai and darkest Africa.

"I have always been with you, and always will," said the Pope in measured, energy-saving tones.

He returned again and again to his theme of combatting communism and paganism. The Cath-

Rebels Attack Home of Sacasa In Nicaragua

U. S. Legation Is Struck by Bullets; Government Holding Ground.

By the United Press.

Managua, Nicaragua, May 31.—Revolutionary forces led by national guard units today attacked the Presidential palace of President Juan B. Sacasa, former Minister to Washington, and were driven off after two hours of machine gun fire.

The number of casualties was unknown.

The office of United States Minister Boaz Long was struck by several bullets but there was no damage.

Enraged by an order of the President disowning abortive governments set up in outlying regions during the past three days, the rebels, believed led by National Guard Commander Gen. Anastasio Somoza, attempted to scale La Loma, the hill on which Government House is located.

The attack did not stop a rebel attempt begun several hours earlier to capture the strategic stronghold of Fort Acosasco, near Leon, which is the stronghold of the revolters.

President Sacasa was in the pal-

Queen Mary to Dock Today; Anglo-U. S. Tie, Bingham Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Aboard the S. S. Queen Mary, May 31.—As the Queen Mary drove into American waters today, with prospects of reaching quarantine in New York tomorrow morning, the importance of the great liner as a significant link between two great English-speaking nations was emphasized in exclusive statements to The Post by Robert W. Bingham, American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, and Sir Percy Bates, chairman of the Cunard Line.

Ambassador Bingham, who will be in Washington Tuesday and will remain in the United States for the period of the national political conventions, was highly enthusiastic over the promise of the Queen Mary and her projected sister ship, George V, developing a bond binding the two democracies.

"Great Britain and the United States," said Ambassador Bingham, "have an invaluable common heritage. Their democratic institutions and insistence on individual freedom have never yielded to any arbitrary force.

"The relapse of many peoples into dictatorships has naturally drawn closer together those nations prizing liberty above all else. I am particularly happy to have been a passenger on the maiden voyage of the Queen Mary. She embodies and symbolizes the strength of the ties binding my country to that

6,300 Women Open Session In City Today

Rural Parley's Delegates Find Haven in Tourist Camps and Tents.

Modesty Is Keynote as Members Flock From All Parts of World.

Women with the imprint of the farm strong upon them and the look of far horizons in their eyes arrived yesterday by the hundreds for one of the most unusual conventions ever held in the National Capital.

First, the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, which opens this noon in Constitution Hall, is the largest gathering of women ever brought to Washington. At least 6,300 have made reservations. Three-fourths of that number had reached the city last night.

But the huge attendance is only one of the many unusual features of the five-day meeting. Most conventions—at least those in the Capital—are show-off times. The women wear their fanciest clothes, deck themselves with flowers, and stay at luxurious hotels. There won't be much of that sort of thing among the members of the Associated Country Women of the World.

Trip Made at Sacrifice.

Aside from the official delegates, most of the hundreds who made the trip did so at considerable sacrifice. Living on farm budgets is anything but a lush affair. Money for the journey to Washington could be ill-spared in a good many cases. And time for most rural housewives is as precious as money at this time of year, with life on the farm approaching its busiest period.

But the women got around those difficulties somehow. They have come, not to attend elaborate banquets, listen to high-flown oratory, or stage individual fashion shows, but to take part in discussions of the practical problems of farm life.

They came to Washington in day coaches, in crowded buses, in their own automobiles. And now that they're here they're staying in tourist camps, in hastily pitched tents, in farmhouses of nearby Maryland and Virginia, and in inexpensive rooms in private homes.

Many of them, of course, have gone to the large hotels. But even there they are having extra cots set up so that the cost for each person will be kept at a minimum.

Bus Brings 29.

Yesterday morning a bus, carrying 29 women from Iowa, pulled into the District's tourist camp. The travelers had been on their way since last Tuesday, sleeping most of the nights in the bus.

"It's not been so easy, but I wouldn't have missed it for anything," smiled one Iowan. "And we're going to stay till the convention is all over. We're going to see everything there is to see in Washington, too."

It was the first trip to the Capital for 25 out of the 29.

In another section of the camp, 20 farm women from Kansas already had settled themselves for a week. They arrived Saturday night, and while 17 of the number attended church yesterday morning, the remaining three donned familiar aprons and prepared dinner, much as they would on their own farms in Leavenworth County.

60 Dwelling in Tents.

Late last night three buses unloaded 60 women from New York State in front of tents set up on the edge of the tourist camp. This group has expressed especial interest in Washington's weather forecast for the week. The climb of the temperature yesterday made the tents fairly comfortable last night.

But whether they were entirely comfortable or not, the women with reservations for tents were a lot better off than several rural homemakers who arrived without making advance plans for lodgings. All yesterday afternoon they sat in the public rooms of the Willard, convention headquarters, while the housing committee got busy in their behalf.

The committee found similar problems on its hands throughout the day, but finally every visiting farm woman was tucked into bed and told how to find Constitution Hall this noon.

According to Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Vancouver Island, Canada, presi-

Suicide Asks Ban On News if He Fails

Isadore Furman, 21, a Treasury Department messenger, killed himself with illuminating gas in the bedroom of his apartment at 1429 Columbia road northwest yesterday. He left a note asking that there be no publicity in case he failed to die.

The youth's body was found in the room, about 15 feet from the kitchen, where all gas jets on the stove were open, by Miss Sarah G. Fischer, manager of the building, who went to the apartment when residents complained of smelling gas.

Members of the Fire Rescue Squad tried to revive him. He was pronounced dead by a doctor from Emergency Hospital.

An unsigned note found in the room read, in part:

"If I am unsuccessful please do not notify the newspapers. This suicide is premeditated. I have been planning it for two years. I don't think suicide is a disgraceful act."

'Douse the Driver,' New Harvard Game

Cambridge, Mass., May 31 (AP). Harvard students found a new game today—dousing passing motorists with water.

Utilizing waste baskets as containers, the students took time out from studying for examinations to hurl water from the windows of Lowell, Adams, Winthrop and Leverett dormitories.

Hundreds of automobiles ran a 300-yard gantlet.

Nearly 300 students joined in and others cheered them on.

The police arrived.

"Mine," muttered one student, spying Sergt. Thomas Stokes. And he let a pail of water fly with almost unerring aim.

Some of the water also doused Charles R. Apted, h[illegible] of the Harvard yard police. The officers started for the dormitory. Windows banged. The students went back to their books. The deluge ended.

Murderer of 3, Trapped, Kills Self After Duel

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Angola, La., May 31.—Wilfred Lindsley, 23-year-old Baton Rouge "bad boy," responsible for five killings, added a sixth to his score today and it was himself. Lindsley, object of the greatest manhunt in Louisiana in recent years, killed himself as a posse closed in on him and bullets from their guns spattered around him.

Lindsley had taken cover in a wooded ravine near the prison, where he was discovered by State police and prison guards. They opened fire. The fugitive, who four days ago escaped after murdering the captain of the prison guards and his wife, returned the fire with a rifle.

Then Lindsley's gun jammed. As the possemen advanced, laying down a barrage, the convict shot himself through the chest with a revolver and toppled forward as Sheriff-elect Ted L. Martin and State police reached him.

"I'm shot! I'm dying!" the youthful killer cried.

Chest Burned.

His jacket was ablaze and his chest was severely burned by powder. The officers smothered the flames, but the jacket was burned half away.

Although Lindsley fired 18 shots from the rifle in his last stand, no one was hit. The nearest he came to hitting any of his pursuers was to shoot a gun from the hands of a guard.

Earler today, however, Lindsley shot J. A. Walker., an oil well watchman, in the leg, when the fugitive attempted to steal an automobile parked at the well.

Last week a posseman and a farm youth were shot and killed accidentally in the man hunt. The other death chargeable to Lindsley was the murder for which he was serving life in prison.

Tips Off Guard.

James Hamilton, a trusty guard, abducted Wednesday night by Lindsley, was forced by the fugitive to walk up to the oil well Walker was guarding to see if any prison guards were about. Hamilton was wearing the prison clothing in which Lindsley escaped and would have been shot by two guards stationed in the watchman's shanty if they had not recognized him as a prisoner from Camp E.

"What the hell are you doing here?" demanded Drew Fields, a guard.

"I was kidnaped by Lindsley," said Hamilton, rolling his eyes and making faces at the guard. Fields understood that Lindsley was nearby, and remarked: "I'm going in here and get my coat." He turned to enter the tool house where Walker and his fellow guard were waiting. He had left his gun there.

Lindsley, suspicious, fired at Fields. The bullet went wild, plowed through the wall of the tool house and struck Walker.

Hamilton dived behind the automobile Lindsley sought, escaped through the woods and ran to a Negro's cabin for aid. He knew it meant certain death if he appeared on the highway in Lindsley's clothing. The Negro ran to the highway and notified State police, turned in the alarm and raced back after Lindsley.

The oil well is in sight of Percy's general store, which was field headquarters for the possemen. Bloodhounds and officers were rushed there and surrounded Lindsley, where he had hidden in a deep gully.

They advanced across flat ground with little cover, in the face of

Lawyer, 24, Drowns In Potomac River

A week-end camping party down the Potomac ended in tragedy yesterday for two brothers.

Harbor police recovered the body of Richard Bowman, jr., 24-year-old attorney, of 3308 Park place northwest, who slipped from the river bank Saturday afternoon while on a camping trip with his brother, Robert, 21.

The body was found about 15 feet from shore after the river had been dragged for nearly four hours. It was taken to District Morgue, where it was identified by the young man's father, Richard Bowman, sr.

Robert told police he had hired a canoe and he and his brother were paddling to Three Sisters Island for the week-end. Robert said they had stopped on the bank of the river to build a fire when his brother slipped into the water.

Landon Sure, Party Studies Ticket Mate

Committee Wednesday Will Consider 56 Contested Votes.

3 Primaries This Week; Amos Pinchot Queries Kansan on Gold.

With the Republican preconvention campaign virtually closed, final arrangements were being made yesterday for the opening of the Cleveland convention June 9, and attempts to gain last-minute advantages for the various candidates were under way.

The arrangements committee for the Republican convention will meet in Cleveland tomorrow to complete plans for the meeting. Party leaders still were studying platform possibilities and, with nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas almost certain, there was more speculation over the nomination of a Vice Presidential candidate than over the naming of a candidate for President.

The National Economy League issued a statement in which it said that it would exert is influence to persuade both parties to put budget-balancing-economy planks in their platforms. Amos E. Pinchot, New York lawyer, telegraphed Gov. Landon asking how he stood on a return to the gold standard. Pinchot said that he believed such a course would be disastrous.

Judson King, director of the National Popular Government League, issued a pamphlet on the utility records of the various Presidential candidates.

Three Primaries in Week.

Senator Dickinson will face divided opposition in a Republican primary in Iowa today. Tomorrow a Democratic primary will be held in Florida with a record slate of candidates competing for Congressional, State and local offices.

On Wednesday, Indiana Republicans will hold their convention at Indianapolis to choose 28 delegates to the Cleveland convention. It is expected that an uninstructed delegation will be sent. With the naming of Indiana delegates the roster of those who will nominate candidates at Cleveland will be complete.

There are, however, disputes in a number of States. The Republican National Committee will meet in Cleveland Wednesday to iron out these differences. The contests involve 56 votes from South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Alaska and the District of Columbia. The credentials committee will finally report the status of these contests after the convention opens.

League Urges Plank.

The Economy League urged the two major parties to adopt this plank:

"The stability of the national finances is the first requisite of the national welfare. Sound national finance is not a partisan question and must be achieved irrespective of differences of policy of opinion on other subjects. Such stability can be secured only by bringing

Cut in Rail Fares Begins Tomorrow

By the United Press.

Railroad passenger fares throughout the United States return tomorrow to 2 cents a mile in day coaches and 3 cents in Pullmans with the surcharge eliminated.

The reduction from a basic 3.6 cents a mile which has prevailed since 1920 was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission despite the protests of 23 Eastern roads which have started litigation to prevent it. It puts rail fares back to where they were in 1914.

Although it applies to the entire country, actually the reduction affects only the East, since the 2-cent fare has been in operation experimentally for several years in the South and West. It was on the basis of these experiments that the I. C. C. decided to apply the lower rate to the East.

Roosevelt Stand On Taxes Is Key To Adjournment

Insistence by House on Bill Will Protract Session Weeks.

Senate May Meet Tonight on Relief

La Guardia Assails 30% Grants Proposed in WPA Fund Clause.

By Felix Bruner.

Congressional leaders looked to President Roosevelt yesterday for the answer to the question whether Congress will adjourn at the end of this week or will continue in session, perhaps for several weeks.

The decision hinges upon consideration of the tax bill. If President Roosevelt should indicate he is willing to accept the Senate compromise proposal, it is probable that the Senate could pass the measure and that conferees could reach an agreement in time for adjournment Saturday night. If leaders continue to feel the President is not receding from his original proposals, it appears early agreement will not be possible.

The Seventy-fourth Congress went into what may be its last week with the two major problems of the session still unsolved. Besides the tax bill, the Senate must still pass the deficiency appropriations bill, including $1,425,000,000 for relief. Consideration of this measure will be esumed today at 1 p. m., with leaders determined to jam it through to enactment before morning. The Senate will remain in session tonight if necessary.

With the Passamaquoddy and Florida canal issues disposed of, the relief measure faces a fight on two more major points. Some of the Republican members will insist upon an amendment taking administration of relief out of the hands of the Federal Government and return it to the States. Although they have no hope of success, the Republicans are prepared to battle for their point.

PWA Fund in Dispute.

The second subject of controversy involves the continuance of the Public Works Administration, headed by Secretary Ickes. The bill provides for use of a $300,000,000 fund, now in possession of the PWA, for loans and grants for non-Federal projects. The amount of the grants for projects costing over $100,000 is reduced in the Senate bill from 45 per cent of the total cost to 30 per cent. Considerable pressure is being brought to force the figure back to 45 per cent.

American cities have available millions of dollars in PWA projects, but most of their financing and the laws under which the financing is made possible are based on the assumption that grants would amount to 45 per cent.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York, president of the United States Conference of Mayors, in a statement yesterday stated the case of the cities. He said:

Bearing Relief Burden

"The provisions of the Senate deficiency bill reducing the amount of PWA grants from 45 per cent to 30 per cent is nothing but a sham and a bluff. It is designed solely to ruin the whole PWA employment program, since very few major cities in the United States having ap-

Would Reward Industry

SENATOR VANDENBERG.

Reward Social Progress, Plea Of Vandenberg

Senator Would Ease Tax Burden Upon Forward-Looking Industries.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, in a radio broadcast last night advocated rewarding industry for voluntary social progress instead of using the taxing power to punish industry. He urged that these rewards result from voluntary unemployment benefits, retirement wages or profit-sharing.

"Reward private industry by lifting all taxation from all funds thus dedicated to these great social purposes and to equivalent funds in the employer's hands," he said. "Make social progress profitable and you will make it popular."

Vandenberg was interviewed on the air by H. V. Kaltenborn, of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Confident of Victory

Asked if he believed the Republican Party could win this year, he replied that it can and will, if it produces a rationally liberal platform and strong leadership.

"Heaven help the country—and particularly the next generation to whom we are charging all of our bills—if the Republican Party fails," he said.

Asked to define the word "liberal," he said, "a liberal is a fundamentalist who declines to be static." He said there was nothing "liberal" about President Roosevelt's "ripping into the Constitution or contemptuously referring to it as an instrument of 'horse and buggy days.'"

The Michigan Senator said he did not condemn everything the Roosevelt Administration has done, and particularly praised the Federal deposit insurance system.

"Aspiration His Epitaph."

Referring to the failure of President Roosevelt to carry out 1932 platform pledges, Vandenberg remarked that "his noble aspiration is now his epitaph."

"We are still spending $2 for every dollar we take in," he said. "We still pile up enormous debts—for our children to pay. We still revel in waste and extravagance and often in political racketeering. Even so rich and benevolent an old gentleman as Uncle Sam cannot stand it much longer."

The Senator said the unemployed and distressed are entitled to relief.

"They are entitled to it," he said, "without the miserable political exploitation which many of them suffer now."

Vandenberg then described his

Hail Delays Search for Body Of Stark on Mountain in Utah

By the Associated Press.

Morgan, Utah, May 31.—Daring horsemen scaled a rugged 8,000-foot peak today to the wreckage of the plane of Maj. Howard Stark, of Washington, D. C., and found mute testimony of the Department of Commerce flier's attempt to ward off death from cold in a 30-below-zero January night.

Hail frustrated attempts to locate Stark's body and the party returned here to await more favorable weather.

"We expect to find the body within a mile of the wreckage," said Al Reck, Salt Lake City newspapermen, who accompanied the expedition. "He couldn't have gone far in that terrific cold."

Reck said the plane—located yesterday by Fred Weyland, a sheepherder—was found on its back and "pretty badly damaged."

"There was no trace of Stark," Reck continued as he rested with others of the party.

"The plane is lying on a mountain called Horse Ridge, 10 miles north of Lost Creek Canyon and 25 miles northeast of Morgan. Stark was within 20 minutes of Salt Lake City airport when he cracked up.

"The plane's switches were cut and the gasoline shut off."

Reck said a piece of fabric had been torn from the right wing and apparently used by Stark for protection. It was found in the cabin with Stark's luggage—two suitcases and a brief case.

Reck said Department of Commerce officials informed him the flier was dressed only in a light business suit and low shoes.

"Stark did not smoke so probably carried no matches with which to start a fire," Reck said. "From appearances at the plane I would judge that Stark, either uninjured or slightly hurt, started out on foot in the morning for Salt Lake City."

He said the compasses on the dashboard had been ripped off and a map of Salt Lake City and vicinity was missing from an otherwise complete file.

Among those accompanying Reck were Roy Keeley and Lloyd Jeulson, Department of Commerce men who have been directing the search since Stark disappeared January 16 on a flight from Rock Springs, Wyo., in a snowstorm.

Airliner Crashes; 12 Persons Injured

Chicago, May 31 (AP).—A Transcontinental & Western Air transport, carrying 15 persons to Chicago in a nonstop flight from New York, crashed near the Municipal Airport tonight, injuring 12 persons.

The plane struck a house near West Sixty-second street and South Kilbourn avenue, shearing off part of the roof, and collapsed in a vacant lot.

Pilot W. L. Smith, of Newark, and Copilot George Houle, of Columbus, Ohio, were among the injured. Houle suffered a broken arm, but Smith's injuries were said by physicians to be more serious.

Six persons were taken to Holy Cross Hospital, while six others, regarded as less seriously hurt, were treated in the airport's emergency station.

Housing Chief Boosts Garden Homes Project

One to Two Acre Sites Outside Large Cities Planned by McDonald.

By the Associated Press.

A new Administration attack on the housing problem, involving development of "garden homes" outside of large cities, was outlined yesterday by Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator.

Saying that President Roosevelt "is enthusiastic" over the plan, McDonald told newsmen it was aimed at a gradual movement of industrial workers and similar classes from urban and suburban areas to small homes situated on one to two acre plots several miles from city limits.

Emphasizing that "this is not anything in the way of a benevolent proposition" and that no grants of Federal funds were involved, he said it would be accomplished through a broadening of FHA regulations to permit Government insurance of mortgages on such property.

This move will enable bankers and other lenders to advance funds for the development of these "in between" areas for residential purposes, he said. In addition, the FHA will undertake an educational campaign to bring out the advantages of such homes.

McDonald said the idea grew out of a meeting of the Central Housing Committee, on which all Federal building agencies are represented, and had been discussed with the President.

"The President believes that whenever possible people should be on an acre to two acres of ground with trees, gardens and shrubbery," he said.

"This plan has been made possible by inventions and improvements in the last 10 years. Now we have good roads, electricity, water facilities and other conveniences for those areas in between the city and the country. Such a program was not possible during the last building boom.

"Movement into these areas should be encouraged in every possible way, because it will relieve congestion within the cities and will enable people to raise produce in their own gardens."

This last advantage, McDonald said, will be particularly helpful when workers are out of employment.

He said that another important benefit would be the lower cost of land and building in the semirural areas.

Vandenberg

plan of returning administration of relief to the States.

Returning to the discussion of business, he said:

"How can private commerce be healthy when the Government usually treats all business men as though they were public enemies? How can it be healthy when it doesn't know what kind of money its commitments will come due in—until it reads the morning paper and discovers whether the President has issued a new proclamation? How can it be healthy when the Government is constantly planning punitive taxes to hamstring it?

"How can it be healthy if it depends upon tariff protection, as many do, and when it doesn't know what moment a free trade State Department will bargain away all of its essential protection in response to some swivel chair theory of international commerce? How can it be healthy if it doesn't know at what moment the Government will go into business against it?".

"The best thing the Government can do," he said, "its to get off the track and give legitimate business a chance to make jobs for the unemployed."

"We must quit creating more problems than we can solve," he added.

Vandenberg offered the Presidential tax proposals as an example of creating problems. He said they would favor big business at the expense of little business, and would penalize business which is struggling to rise above its debts.

"It burns me up," he said, "to have all the legislation emphasis, at the moment, put upon raising $600,000,000 more revenue, while no emphasis whatever is put upon the preferable alternative of saving $600,000,000 through national economy."

Referring to social security, he said the Government must stay in that field, but added that "the new law is manifestly full of flaws and unworkable."

Asked about the farm problem, Vandenberg said that "artificial scarcity is the open door to national suicide." He said the first thing to do in restoring farm income and purchasing power is to prohibit competitive farm imports and to permit the American farmer to get the full benefit of the American market."

Discussing foreign affairs, the Senator said:

"Under no circumstances would I join the League of Nations.

"I am glad to co-operate for the peace of the world. But I am interested first in the peace of the United States."

Concluding, Vandenberg urged Republicans and Democrats to join "against a common enemy which is in effect a third party—the Roosevelt party."

Politics and People

Sentiment Grows for Vandenberg's Nomination as Vice President; Landon Aids Favorable.

By Franklyn Waltman

A MOVEMENT of some proportions is growing in behalf of Senator Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg, of Michigan, as the Republican Vice Presidential candidate. Senator Vandenberg's prospects as a dark horse for the Presidential nomination have diminished rapidly in recent days as a result of the crystallizing of sentiment around Gov. Alf M. Landon.

WALTMAN

Many of the Landonites like Senator Vandenberg, admire his aggressive Republicanism, and want him to take an active part in the Presidential campaign this year. Indeed, much of the talk about Senator Vandenberg for the Vice Presidency now comes from Gov. Landon's friends.

Gov. Landon's managers, however, are leaving open the Vice Presidential place on the ticket. They will continue to do so until the convention meets in order more accurately to guage the situation and do whatever is necessary to promote their candidate's interests. But, it can be said, they look favorably on Senator Vandenberg.

For instance, it is argued that the Michigan Senator would bring more to the Republican ticket after the convention than any other man. He is an able and aggressive speaker. He has a good record in the Senate from the party's viewpoint—much better than any other Republican in that body, it might be said. The only objection made to his candidacy is that he is from Michigan and that his selection along with that of Gov. Landon would give the Middle West both places on the Republican ticket.

Some political leaders are inclined to lay great emphasis on a geographical balance for the ticket. But the argument also is made that Senator Vandenberg's selection would assure the Republicans carrying Michigan and would aid the party's prospects in Ohio and Illinois, three industrial States which are as necessary to Republican success as Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and some Eastern States. As Senator William E. Borah's friend, Senator Vandenberg's selection also would serve as a peace gesture to the Lion of Idaho.

Assuming that the situation shapes up in such a way that the Vice Presidential nomination is offered to Senator Vandenberg, would he take it? Many of his friends think he would. In the beginning these friends have not been enthusiastic about Senator Vendenberg being nominated this year. They fear that President Roosevelt will be re-elected and that Senator Vandenberg's best chance would be in 1940.

The outlook for Republican success has greatly improved since Senator Vandenberg's friends first formulated that view. Some of them now wish he had made an aggressive campaign for the nomination this year. They realize that if Gov. Landon is nominated and elected this year, he will, without doubt, if he is alive, be renominated by the party in 1940. And 1944 is too far away to worry about.

Many of Senator Vandenberg's friends now believe the smartest thing for him would be to accept the Vice Presidential nomination if it is offered to him. If the ticket wins, he at least will have attained the Vice Presidency. If the ticket loses, he will be in a strategic position to make a claim for the Presidential nomination in 1940, it is argued. He will have toured the country, made thousands of friends and will return to the Senate the ackowledged Republican leader. In that post he would be able to keep himself constantly before the country during the next four years.

Of course, there are others whose names figure prominently as Vice Presidential possibilities. Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York, is one. It is argued that not only would he give geographical balance to the ticket, but would also supply qualities in which Gov. Landon is deficient. He is an outstanding wet. The Kansan's State record has been dry. The New Yorker has had a broad experience with national problems. Gov. Landon has had little. Representative Wadsworth understands the psychology of the big cities. Gov. Landon is closer to the rural areas and the small towns than to the metropolitan centers.

In the event that the Landon candidacy should run into stormy weather at Cleveland and the New York leaders withheld that State's delegate vote from him, the Kansan's managers might be forced to agree to accept Representative Wadsworth for Vice President in order to put their candidate across.

In recent days a boom has been started for Robert A. Taft, Ohio's "favorite son" for the Presidency, for the Vice Presidential nomination. He is an able attorney and has achieved an enviable reputation for his interest in municipal reform in Cincinnati and for good government when he served in Ohio's Legislature. Since he is the son of the former President, Mr. Taft's selection would mean an actual healing of the wound suffered by the party in 1912. Gov. Landon that year was a Bull Mooser.

In this matter of a Vice Presidential candidate, the key to the situation is directly in the hands of Gov. Landon and his managers. They are so close to the Presidential nomination that they can make any kind of a bargain they wish—and just at this moment there are a number of Republican leaders who would like to bargain with them.

U.S. Loan Today Demands Best Rate in History

Record Peacetime Flotation of $2,050,754,400 to Be Launched.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States Treasury will get the best terms in its history when it asks the public today for $2,050,754,400—the largest peacetime loan in the history of this Government.

One billion dollars of the total to be asked is new cash, thus increasing the public debt to $32,643,000,000. When the total bonus financing is added to the debt before the end of the fiscal year July 1, the sum will reach an all-time peak of about $35,200,000,000.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., in asking for the sum, expressed pleasure in the fact that the Government's carrying charges are being constantly reduced. He said:

Rates Best on Record.

"These rates represent the best terms on which the Government has ever been able to sell ts securities."

The rates are:

On the new money, the Secretary seeks $600,000,000, secured by 15-to-18-year bonds carrying 2¾ per cent interest, and $400,000,000 of five-year notes at 1¾ per cent interest.

Either of these securities is offered in exchange for $686,816,400 of maturing notes at 1¼ per cent on June 15, and for $364,138,000 of notes maturing August 1 at 3¼ per cent. The new securities will be dated June 15.

The new cash and such incoming revenues as the quarterly income tax installments due this month will swell the present cash balance of $2,389,000,000 sufficiently to meet the bonus payments and all other demands until the next financing date, September 15.

Recalls December Issue.

The Secretary pointed out, in stressing the interest rate reductions, that the December flotation last year consisted of 10-to-12-year bonds at 2¾ per cent interest and 5-year notes at 1½ per cent. The March 15 bond maturity became 12-15 years, still at 2¾ per cent, and the 5-year notes stood unchanged at 1½ per cent. He added:

"Now we are selling a 15-to-18-year bond at 2¾ per cent interest and are reducing the rate on the 5-year note to 1¾ per cent."

Commenting on the newly tightened regulations, which will eliminate "joyriders" as nearly as possible from the "padding" of subscriptions, the Secretary said:

"These regulations protect the legitimate investor from the speculative dealer. Legitimate buyers are very much pleased with the regulations. Some of the people that have been getting 'free rides' are not pleased, but on the whole the reaction is favorable."

Regulations Listed.

The regulations sent by the Treasury to the 12 Federal Reserve banks include increasing the cash deposit rate on subscription from 5 to 10 per cent; require certification that the bank customers' applications for securities are in the amount entered on the subscriptions, and that the bank certify that each application is made in good faith. The bank also must state it does not stand to benefit from the transaction.

The Secretary was asked to comment on the probable response of the public to the request. He refused, reaffirming his usual attitude that the market would speak for him. It is known he is optimistic, especially when the enormous excess reserves now carried with the Reserve banks by member banks are considered.

These balances totaled $5,747,000,000 May 27, and the Federal Reserve then estimated them to be $2,900,000,000 in excess of requirements.

Labor Council Held Prepared To Drop Lewis

By the Associated Press.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor was reliably reported yesterday to be planning to suspend its nine richest and strongest unions which have more than a million members.

The craft union group, led by William Green, federation president, was said to be prepared to read out all of the industrial unionists who follow John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and to be willing to sacrifice a third of the federation's membership and a much greater portion of its finances rather than effect a compromise.

Green wants to continue to organize industry by skilled groups, while Lewis would seek to unite all workers, skilled and unskilled, by industries into one big union.

The craft unionists, it was learned, intend to suspend the charters of the nine industrial unions at the July executive council session, a power granted the council under the American Federation of Labor constitution.

Its next move will be an attempt to expel the suspended members at the next convention of the entire federation, depending on whether the necessary two-thirds majority required for expulsion is obtained. The industrialist group, it was said, will fight this procedure.

The rift, which broke into open rebellion last week when the Lewis group turned down a command from Green to dissolve their committee for industrial organization, has threatened for more than two years to split the federation.

Hope that George Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks, would succeed in making peace between the two groups faded when the Green ultimatum, handed two weeks ago to the Lewis faction, was signed by a committee headed by Harrison.

The groups in the powerful industrial combine include Lewis' 400,000 miners, Sidney Hillman's Amalgamated Clothing Workers, David Dubinsky's International Ladies' Garment Union, the Oil Workers, Typographers, Flat Glass Workers, Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, and Textile Workers.

Townsend, Aids Gird to Battle 'Dictatorship'

Founder of Plan Prefers 'Anyone but Roosevelt' for President.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 31.—United with a pledge "to take over the Government," Dr. Francis E. Townsend and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith moved up-State today to begin their attacks "against the dictatorship in Washington."

"We stood under the historic arch in Valley Forge and vowed to take over the Government," Smith, head of the Share-the-Wealth Clubs, organized by the late Senator Huey P. Long, said last night as he and Dr. Townsend, head of the old-age pension movement bearing his name, announced the merger of their forces, long rumored but often denied.

They left for Allentown today after an overnight stop in Philadelphia. They prepared their remarks to be given at a mass assembly there tonight.

"We are presenting," Dr. Townsend said, "a common front against the dictatorship in Washington."

"Add to that communism and Farleyism," Smith interjected, "and you have our platform."

Dr. Townsend, apparently undisturbed by the action of a Congressional committee which cited him for contempt after he walked out on one of its investigation hearings on his movement, said, "anyone but Roosevelt" in reply to a question of his Presidential preference.

He termed the President as "taboo to our followers," and issued a warning, "if he is elected again, he will pack the Supreme Court with Farley politicians and you can kiss our American traditions goodby."

Ten million members were claimed by the representatives of the two movements, 4,000,000 by Townsend and 6,000,000 by Smith.

From Rich Man's Toy to Everyday Necessity

with the aid of Instalment Buying

As late as 1912, most visitors to automobile showrooms admired—but did not buy. Terms were cash. Prices were high and few had sufficient ready money available. Only the wealthy could afford a car—men of moderate means looked on and yearned.

Then instalment buying was introduced and changed all that. Cars were no longer the exclusive property of the rich. Any responsible person could enjoy one while paying for it out of earnings.

Prices Drop Hundreds per Car

People who never dreamed of owning cars began to enjoy them. Sales increased, better cars were built, employment gained and prices dropped. The finest "machine" made in 1912 cost many times as much as a 1936 model that is infinitely more comfortable, more economical and more reliable. Whether you buy for cash or on credit, you may thank engineering skill, mass production and instalment buying for this remarkable saving.

C. I. T. was one of the first to enable automobile dealers to offer convenient terms to responsible purchasers—thus helping to turn a rich man's toy into an everyday necessity. Today, the C. I. T. Budget Plan brings better cars and such home conveniences as refrigerators, washing machines and radios to millions. Wisely used, the C. I. T. Plan makes incomes more valuable, homes more cheerful, and countless families healthier and happier.

Palestine Finds Italian Posters Attacking Jews

Four More Are Killed as Rioting Is Renewed in Holy Land.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, May 31.—Police said tonight they had unearthed a collection of posters in hand-printed Italian declaring all Jews are "Communists and enemies of Europe and Christianity." Meanwhile, renewed disorders cost four more lives.

Three Arabs, one a woman, were killed by police fire at Jaffa. A German Jew was slain in Jerusalem.

An Arab committee in charge of a general strike called April 19 issued a manifesto deprecating the use of violence.

The twenty-seventh Jewish victim of the unrest was shot to death in a Jewish quarter here. He was Franz Bordshadt, 45, a recent settler from Germany and the official collector for the German Settlers' Association.

The Palcor Agency reported that with the Arab supreme council yesterday calling upon its constituency to ignore the pleas of the high commissioner for the termination of the general strike, Arab snipers, terrorists and demonstrators continued to defy the authority of the British government in Palestine.

Take Shots at Police.

Today's slayings at Jaffa, which bring the total casualties during the disturbances to near the 70 mark, occurred when a crowd of Arabs began taking pot-shots at a police patrol. In the exchange fire from constables' guns, a woman in the vicinity was killed. The two other Arabs were among the party of attackers.

Comparative quiet reigned in the various settlements of the Jewish community which yesterday had been the scene of widespread arson and destruction of property. Shots were fired, however, in Haifa, Hedera, Schunath Borochov, and Nachlet Isaac near Tel Aviv.

Police guarding the Jewish settlement of Ain Harod engaged in a gun battle with Arab snipers nestled in the hillside of Mount Gilboa.

One thousand rifles were captured today by French frontier guards on the Syrian border, it was reported here. Three cars had attempted to smuggle the arms into Palestine.

League Group to Meet.

Geneva, May 31 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The League of Nations mandates commission will meet tomorrow in secret session on the Palestine situation with a report before it from the Jewish agency for Palestine urging an increase in Jewish immigration to safeguard the Jewish homeland from further attacks.

A letter from Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the agency, accompanying the annual memorandum told Great Britain, the mandatory power, that Arab attacks could not shake the determination of the Jewish people to "rebuild its national home in Palestine."

Zioncheck Searches for Bride

the Zioncheck apartment Friday night, in which it was said she, forcibly ejected Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, the couple's landlady, from the apartment, was reported to be "in a highly nervous state but resting with friends."

Lucius C. Q. Lamar, jr., son of the attorney employed by Zioncheck to defend him against Mrs. Young, who is attempting to oust the Representative for his "disgraceful housekeeping," admitted he knew where Mrs. Zioncheck was staying.

Asked whether he had informed Zioncheck where his wife was, Lamar replied, "I believe he knows her whereabouts."

Informed of Zioncheck's wanderings around the city in search of his wife, Lamar corrected himself to say, "Well, I couldn't be sure that he does. But I know where she is."

On the question of whether a reconciliation between the couple was being arranged, Lamar replied, "I would rather not say anything one way or the other."

Several hours later, Lamar said he had been mistaken and did not know where Mrs. Zioncheck was. In admitting knowing her whereabouts, he had said she had "moved about quite a bit" yesterday afternoon and it was thought she may have moved again without informing the lawyer.

Friends of Mrs. Zioncheck thought she was being kept away from the Representative until she recovers from the strain of Friday night's upheaval. They felt certain she was still in the city and placed no credence in reports she had gone to Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Young, who sublet her apartment to Zioncheck, to her regret, was reported "resting comfortably" yesterday in Emergency Hospital, where she was taken for treatment of bruises, nervous shock and an injured hip, suffered, she said, in a struggle with Mrs. Zioncheck Friday night. Her lawyer, Philip Herrick, jr., said he was undecided whether to take legal action against the Representative.

Zioncheck's wild tour of the city in search for his wife started shortly after midnight Saturday, following a riotous day that was climaxed by a struggle with police and his subsequent arrest.

Arrested Fourth Time.

Police were called by John W. Crabbs, mnaager of Harvard Hall, when the Representative flung several empty rum bottles, a typewriter and a suitcase containing some of Mrs. Zioncheck's trousseau, out of his apartment window. It was the fourth time "the wild man from Seattle" had been arrested this year.

Released on collateral posted by his secretary, Marion Young, Zioncheck sneaked out the rear door of the jail and sped away on what his secretary called a "trip to Atlantic City." Actually, however, the Representative went to a local hotel to get some sleep.

After several restless hours he returned to his apartment and tried to locate Mrs. Zioncheck by telephone. Failing to reach his bride, he dashed into the street, hailed a passing taxicab and started on a wild ride through the city.

It was about 1 a. m.. Zioncheck's fist stop was a downtown hotel where he had left Mrs. Zioncheck Saturday afternoon following lunch together. Like a man gone mad, he strode into the hotel lobby, demanding his wife.

Police Reach Scene.

Hotel employes refused to permit him to use the elevator, whereupon he dashed up the stairs. The staircase he chose, however, only went as far as the second floor and he was stranded. When police arrived Zioncheck left.

Returning to the taxicab, he went to 1606 New Hampshire avenue northwest, where Mrs. Zioncheck had lived before her marriage a month ago.

Rousing the occupants of the house, Zioncheck demanded his wife for a second time, to be met with a negative reply. From New Hampshire avenue, he sped to 4700 Connecticut avenue, the home of Charles S. Nix, his wife's uncle. Nix was in New York on a business trip and his apartment was closed.

By this time the sky was lighting with the first traces of dawn. The weary Representative said he would return to his apartment and reporters left for their homes. Soon after they left, however, Zioncheck took up the hunt anew, returning to Harvard Hall shortly after lunch.

Scarcely able to keep his eyes open, he broke into the apartments of several of his neighbors, abruptly searching rooms, demanding of occupants:

"Have you seen my wife?"

To get his mind off his wife, he played a game of ping pong with the younger Lamar, apparently unaware that Lamar knew where she was. The game over, he made a tour of local parking lots, finally discovering the roadster in which his wife had driven off Saturday. Satisfied that she still was in the city, the worn-out Representative returned home and dropped exhausted into bed.

ported bottles, fishes and a typewriter had been thrown from the windows.

Mrs. Nix said today her daughter and Zioncheck had called her three times since they returned from their honeymoon and Ruby reported they were "divinely happy."

Mrs. Nix added her daughter telephoned from Washington Friday night to tell her not "to believe everything you read about us." That was the night the Zionchecks skirmished with their landlady, Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, over possession of the apratment.

Mr. and Mrs. Nix live four miles north of Texarkana.

Nix, like his son-in-law, was inclined to discuss the speed matter with the police, he said. Referring to a Texarkana officer whom he said had stopped him and warned him of speeding 35 miles an hour, he asserted with a grin:

"I told him he was wrong, that my truck wouldn't go that fast. When the Congressman comes down here, I'm going to put him in the car with me and we're going down Broad street (Texarkana's main thoroughfare) with her wide open. He can drive if he wants to."

Mrs. Nix revealed that neighbors from miles around were planning to stage a gala "house warming" when the Zionchecks visit Arkansas.

"They ask me every day when Rubye is coming," she said. "They said they wanted to bring their lunches and spend an entire day when they get here.

"Rubye told me over the telephone when they were coming, but told me to keep it secret. I wish they could have a few days rest here without all this publicity."

Mrs. Nix said she had read a magazine story comparing Zioncheck to Abraham Lincoln.

The telephone at the Nix home has been busier than ever before during the last few weeks and the house, situated a mile from a paved highway, has drawn numerous sightseers anxious to see the home of the girl married to the Washington

French Strikers Given Promise Of 40-Hr. Week

Demand to Be His First Act, Says Blum, as New Walkouts Impend.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 31.—Hope of a 40-hour week was placed before thousands of French strikers tonight by Leon Blum who is to become the first socialist premier of France this week.

Speaking at a socialist congress, Blum said critics who talked of possible repercussions of a present strike, "forget too quickly that the workers have just sent into office a government whose first act will be to ask for a 40-hour week."

Armies of strikers holding metal factories in the Paris region dwindled today but the government was disturbed by the prospect of a new wave of strikes Tuesday.

3,000 Strikers Hold Out.

Independent settlements, hastened by workers who want to enjoy a legal holiday tomorrow, left 8,000 weary strikers encamped in factories, hoping for a truce to permit evacuation.

A garrison holding the Licorne automobile plant in the suburb of Courbevoie sang throughout the night and disturbed the sleep of a factory manager who was a prisoner in his private office. Four executives were held for the night behind picket lines in two other plants.

Union officials warned the Government that workers in other factories would begin "crossed arms" strikes when they went to work Tuesday. Some garrisons of strikers were supplied with food and drink by communist municipalities.

The strikers, in automobile, airplane and munitions factories, are demanding the right of collective bargaining.

New Chamber to Meet.

France's new Chamber of Deputies, the first in the history of the third republic to give a "paper majority" to a Socialist premier, opens tomorrow.

The first session is expected to be a formal one with real work beginning Tuesday—the day union officials warned that new strikes would be begun in the metallurgical industries.

Blum said "the social panic which has replaced the monetary panic—strikes—is inevitable. We expected to meet difficulties on assuming power. We will solve them quickly, proving ourselves worthy of the working class."

Political observers said a night session Tuesday might permit Premier Albert Sarraut to submit his resignation, with the Blum cabinet taking over the following day.

Crystallized Rail Blamed for Wreck

Guthrie, Okla., May 31 (AP).—A crystallized rail was blamed by railroad officials today for derailment of part of the Santa Fe passenger train, "Texas Ranger," at a high bridge over the Cimarronn River yesterday which took the lives of two railway clerks.

No passengers were injured seriously. The bodies of the clerks—Raymon McNulty, 39, of Guthrie, and Leonard F. Guiff, of Independence, Mo.—were recovered late last night from a splintered baggage car, which plunged from the 35-foot-high bridge into 13 feet of water.

About 125 passengers were on the train, which was brought to a quick halt by the engineer as he felt the first jar.

Selassie, 'Much Better,' Boards Ship for Britain

Gibraltar, May 31. (AP).—Emperor Haile Selassie sailed today for England.

Before boarding a ship the Emperor said, "While not feeling what you might call good, I feel much better than when I landed."

The Negus said he passed a sleepless night. He gave gold coins bearing the image of the late Emperor Menelik of Ethiopia to detectives who guarded him while he was in Gibraltar.

Malaku E. Bayen, a former student at Ohio University, is traveling with the fugitive Emperor and his financial secretary.

Peasant Party Demands Carol Expel Lupescu

520,000 Rumanians Parade; Urge Persecution of Nazi Groups.

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, May 31.—In gigantic country-wide demonstrations, 520,000 farmers of the Rumanian Peasant Party protested today against the influence of Mme. Magda Lupescu in the government and urged official persecution of Nazi organizations.

It was the greatest mobilization of the Peasant Party, headed by Ion Mihalache, in the history of the nation. In the capital, 120,000 marched through the main streets, while parades and protest meetings in which 400,000 participated took place at other points.

Mihalache, addressing a huge but orderly crowd of Peasant Party members in Bucharest after their five-hour parade, demanded the immediate resignation of the government of Premier George Tatarescu, which he said was in terror of the Nazis.

Although the peasant leaders pledged loyalty to King Carol, he strongly requested that the King's intimate friend, Mme. Lupescu, should be banished from Rumania.

"The roads between the King and the peasants," Mihalache said, "should no longer be barricaded by the court Camarilla."

While belief was expressed in political circles that the government would not be changed before autumn, fear was voiced that if King Carol again refused to comply with the frequent requests for expulsion of Mme. Lupescu, he might be forced to part from her because of Mihalache's influence.

The peasant leader for the first time displayed his party's own mounted police, consisting of hundreds of young, husky farmers dressed in national costumes with white crosses on their sleeves.

C. R. Thompson Dies Here at 52; Transit Official

Was Sailing Boat in Pool, With Son, When Stricken by Heart Attack.

Clinton R. Thompson, secretary of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., died yesterday of a heart attack suffered while he was sailing a model yacht in the Lincoln Memorial reflecting pool with his son, Paul, 8. Thompson was 52 years old.

He complained of a heart pain as he and the boy stood on the brink of the pool wacthing the boat. Accompanied by the boy he staggered to the Tidal Basin boathouse, where an ambulance was called. He was taken to Emergency Hospital and pronounced dead on arrival.

Thompson was a model boat enthusiast. He was secretary of the Model Yacht Club, of Washington.

At Pool Short Time.

He and his son had been at the reflecting pool, where a dozen or so other model yachtsmen were sailing their tiny craft, for about a half hour when the heart attack came. A 6-foot yacht, made by Thompson, was cutting the tranquil water of the pool under full canvas. He appeared in perfect health.

Thompson was born in Concord, N. H., May 5, 1884. He attended school there and came to Annapolis, where he attended the United States Naval Academy for a short time. Before graduation he came to Washington and accepted a position as engineer for the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

He remained with the Government for ten years. Then he was appointed secretary to the late Senator Jacob Gallinger, a position he kept another ten years.

Joined Transit Company.

Since his resignation as Gallinger's secretary he has been secretary of the transit company.

He was married in Washington on October 28, 1913.

Three children, Paul, 9; Joan, 16, and Franklin, 21 and Mrs. Thompson survive.

Thompson was a member of the Board of Trade.

Seven Feared Dead As Floods Recede

Granada, Colo., May 31 (AP).—Four persons were known dead and three others apparently perished before high waters of the Memorial Day floods receded slowly today in the dust bowl areas of Southeastern Colorado and Western Kansas.

The dead: Don Gates, 27, Denver, drowned near Stratton, Colo.; Mrs. John Dyatt, died of shock while fleeing floods near Goodland, Kans.; A. C. Baumgartner, farmer, drowned near Pritchett, Colo., and Simon Gonzales, 30, sheepherder, drowned near Springfield, Colo.

The missing: Gonzale's wife, their 3-year-old daughter and John Grazie, 65, farm hand, who lived in the Gonzale's home.

Water was still running high in creek beds and arroyos but in most cases was confined to the banks. A minor duststorm blew in the Springfield area.

Gonzales' body was discovered half buried beneath a pile of driftwood and debris on the edge of Butte Creek north of Springfield. Jackson said search of the pile might uncover other bodies.

The bunkhouse in which Gonzales and Garzie lived was washed 3 miles from the edge of Butte Creek. The high water, which sent the Arkansas and Republican rivers out of their banks, came on the anniversary of the 1935 Memorial Day floods, which killed more than 100 persons and caused an estimated $13,000,000 property damage in Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska.

Canadian Inquiry Asked in Hanging

Detroit, May 31 (AP).—Michigan's attorney general, David H. Crowley, asked Canadian authorities today to investigate the hanging of a Wyandotte (Mich.) steel worker May 14 on Fighting Island, in the Detroit River, for possible connection with the Black Legion.

The body of Roy Piedpock, 32, was found suspended from a rafter in a workmen's shanty on the island, which is in Canadian waters. No boat was moored to the island, and authorities expressed doubt at the time that Piedpock could have swam from the American shore to the island. The body was clad only in underwear.

Although Wyandotte police expressed belief that Piedpock committed suicide, other Michigan authorities cited evidence that the Black Legion had been active in Detroit's down-river suburbs, and requested further investigation, thus injecting an international angle into the inquiry.

Ribbentrop's Visit May Be Political

Belfast Northern Ireland, May 31 (AP).—Arrival of a dozen British Air Force planes today at Lord Londonderry's residence, where Herr Joachim von Ribbentrop is a week-end guest, caused renewed speculation as to whether Hitler's envoy may be combining politics with "fun."

When the German Ambasador-at-large joined Lord Londonderry in London a few days ago he said "this time I am here for fun." Lord Londonderry, a prominent figure in national government circles and Premier Baldwin's former lord privy seal and party leader in the House of Lords, also is entertaining Sir Edward E. Ellington, chief of the British air staff.

Pilots of the planes joined the party at the Mount Stewart residence, but guests refused to comment on reports published in the London Sunday Referee that the German emissary was trying to obtain Lord Londonderry's support for an Anglo-German mutual assistance pact.

Ellis Smith, Laborite leader, said in Commons last week "we are suspicious" of the von Ribbentrop-Lord Londonderry rendezvous. Lord suspicious" of the Von Ribbentrop-for air.

Butterworth Dies; Formerly Headed C. of C.

Illinois Manufacturer Is Stricken at Atlantic City Country Club.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 31.—William Butterworth, 71, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and chairman of the board of directors of Deere & Co., of Moline, Ill., manufacturers of farming implements, fell dead from a heart attack today. He was the son of the late Senator Benjamin Butterworth, of Illinois.

He was walking on the Seaview Country Club grounds, near Absecon, 10 miles west of here, when he was stricken. He resided in Moline.

Butterworth arrived at the club Friday after attending a conference of the National Industrial Conference Board in New York.

He fell near the ninth hole of the golf course while strolling with Charles Cheney, retired silk manufacturer of South Manchester, Conn. Cheney summoned Howard Heinz, president of Heinz & Co., of Pittsburgh, who was one of a nearby party of golfers.

A nurse from the club house was called and first aid was administered. Dr. Isaac E. Leonard, county physician, pronounced death due to a heart attack.

Butterworth was well known in Washington. He was a member of the Congressional Country Club there.

The body was sent tonight to Moline. It was accompanied by Silas H. Strawn, Chicago attorney, also a former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and former president of the American Bar Association.

Butterworth was born in Maineville, Ohio, in 1864. He was educated in the public schools of Cincinnati and Washington, and was graduated from Lehigh University in 1889 with a mechanical engineering degree. Later he was made an honorary doctor of business administration at Syracuse University.

He has been associated with Deere & Co. since 1892. Since the death of its founder, Charles H. Deere, in 1907, he has directed the activities of the company.

He was chairman of the board of the Moline National Bank; a director of the United Light & Power Co. and the Illinois Bell Telephone Co.

He is survived by his wife, the former Katherine Mary Deere, granddaughter of the founder of Deere & Co., and a brother, Dr. Frank Butterworth, of New Haven, Conn.

SMOKE CAMELS
UNDER THE BIG TOP. Circus life puts performers on their mettle. Yet, watching Miss Dorothy Herbert of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey, you marvel at her poise and daring. Her cigarette? Camel! Miss Herbert says: "I smoke all I want—eat anything I care for. Camels make food taste better and digest easier. They are so comforting—with their cheery 'lift.' Camels have a royal flavor!"
Smoking Camels stimulates the flow of digestive fluids...increases alkalinity
Life sometimes pushes us so hard that we feel too worn-down really to enjoy eating. Science explains this by saying that hurry, mental strain, and constant tension reduce the flow of the digestive fluids.
Evidence shows that smoking Camels increases the flow of digestive fluids...alkaline digestive fluids...so vital to the enjoyment of food and to good digestion.
Camel's rich and costly tobaccos are mild beyond words. Enjoy Camels—with meals—any time—for the sheer pleasure they bring you...for their cheering "lift"...for their aid to digestion. Camels set you right! And never jangle your nerves or tire your taste.

The chef is putting the final touches to a Lobster Thermidor, while within the restaurant proper the glittering stars of Hollywood gather to dine and to enjoy Camels. In the glamorous life of Hollywood, Camels play a major rôle. The supreme mildness and flavor of their costlier tobaccos have made Camels an outstanding favorite. As Mr. Robert H. Cobb (above, left), the man behind The Brown Derby's success and host at one time or another to every great personality in Hollywood, remarks: "Camels are the choice of a great majority of our patrons."

"It's a life of hurry, hurry, hurry," says Peter Dahlen, crack newspaper man, "and a life of irregular hours...irregular meals. Unrest In France.

When an epidemic of strikes broke out in the munitions, metals, automobile and other industries in France last week, on the eve of the formation of a Popular Front government, the Right press was quick to charge that these labor disturbances were political rather than economic in origin.

There was an ominous similarity, they insisted, between the present occupation by workers of the Renault, Citroen and other plants in France and the Communist attempt in Italy in 1920 to seize and operate the leading factories. But this melodramatic theory has gained little credence.

In the first place, it is clear that the striking workers, whom the Right press accuses of being merely the tools of victory-drunk Communists, have not attempted in any single instance to run the factories they have occupied. They have maintained good order and their demands have been, for the most part, relatively moderate and in no sense political. Actually they are seeking higher wages, better working conditions and the right of collective bargaining. These demands are no whit different from those made in thousands of strikes in France and elsewhere. Already, in fact, some of the principal strikes have been settled and the workers have gone back to their jobs.

Yet this epidemic of strikes does have a bearing on the political situation. For one of the root causes of industrial unrest in France is the failure of the deflationary measures taken by a succession of French governments during the past few years to restore prosperity to the republic. The attempt to bring down costs of production to the level obtaining elsewhere has met with only slight success. The deflation of wages has, in the meantime, aroused resentment sufficient to bring about a sweeping victory of the Left.

The alternative to deflation is devaluation. But that alternative is unwelcome and the Popular Front stands committed as a unit to the "defense of the franc." It is difficult to see how it can keep the franc at its present gold parity, however, while embarking on an extensive program of public works, wiping out cuts in pensions and governmental salaries and reducing the work-week without any reduction in salaries. Obviously the path of the government that is about to come into being in France will not be easy.

The Real Parking Problem.

In one of his recent memoranda to the District Commissioners, People's Counsel Roberts proposes that they take over regulations of the city's parking lots. To this recommendation he appends a long list of complaints, ranging from insults to thefts, reported to his office by Washington motorists. Authority for such regulation, Mr. Roberts believes, may be found in a general license law enacted by Congress several years ago.

None will object to any plan which can improve Washington's parking facilities, but the immediate reaction to Mr. Roberts' proposal is that it deals with the superficial aspects of an important community problem. Politeness and insurance against petty thefts on parking lots are not nearly so urgent as the careful planning of more space for daytime storage of automobiles. In the past five years the District's population has jumped 22 per cent and nearby Virginia and Maryland suburbs must have shown an even larger increase. Meantime, too, both official and private building has been proceeding apace, principally in the congested downtown area. The result is, as every one knows to his sorrow, that to park a car in that neighborhood is a practical impossibility.

And Washington is doing virtually nothing about it. Occasionally, a new lot is cleared and rented out as a parking space. At best, however, these are but temporary palliatives. From time to time there is talk of erecting skeleton buildings to serve as downtown garages. Considerations of expense, not to say esthetics, usually dispose of these plans quickly. There are, it is true, a few underground garages but these can accommodate only a sprinkling of the daily deluge of motor vehicles. With all our city planning the increasing use of private automobiles seems to be largely ignored. If the Commissioners wish seriously to tackle the city's parking problem, let them first turn their minds to the broader aspects of it.

A Surrender Of Principle.

By reviving the Florida ship canal project and rejecting the scheme to harness the tides of Passamaquoddy the Senate has involved itself in a ridiculous tangle. In each case the vote involved only one underlying principle—the responsibility of Congress for the expenditure of public funds. But in one case the Senate evaded its obligation, and in the other it voted against an indefensible policy only because of the feud which had developed between the sponsors of the two projects.

It is obvious to the meanest intelligence that the real function of the board of investigation approved by the Senate would be to apply a coat of whitewash to the ship canal project. In the midst of his campaign for re-election the President would be given authority to select a board to vindicate his own judgment in launching a scheme that was found impractical by his own Public Works Administration. The Senate has merely washed its hands of the whole sordid business. That attitude is far more detrimental to the public interest than the original grant of authority under which the President committed his Administration to these experiments. For now the Senate has "passed the buck," knowing that the unprecedented discretion previously granted to the President has been abused.

The major question is not one of financing two costly blunders. It is possible that the President could have shifted work relief funds still under his control to continue this large-scale boondoggling in Maine and Florida. But he wants Congress to share with him the responsibility of spending public funds on these questionable ventures. That, of course, was his objective when he sought funds through a regular appropriations bill and was again his objective in trying to interpolate Passamaquoddy and ship canal amendments into the current deficiency bill.

The chief weakness of the Senate's position is that it has surrendered to this strategy, in respect to the most costly of the two projects, without attempting to learn for itself whether or not the ship canal can be economically justified. In other words, the Senate has done nothing to protect the public interest, but has pusillanimously signed a blank authorization for the President to go ahead, with its approval, if he so desires. That attitude carries Congressional irresponsibility to extremes that are difficult to tolerate even in an election year.

The Senate's action is the more to be regretted because it breaks down the sound principle written into the bill by its appropriations committee. "No Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted" with relief funds, that amendment provided, unless an amount sufficient for its completion is "allocated and irrevocably set aside."

To Senator Vandenberg goes the lion's share of the credit for enunciating this principle and fighting to maintain it against the pressure tactics of the Administration's spokesmen. He was supported, however, by Democrats as well as Republicans who appreciate the danger of executive usurpation of legislative functions. Chief among those functions is control over the public purse. A waste of taxpayers' money, serious though it certainly is, should not be permitted to overshadow the even more important principle of reserving for the legislature the control of national policy.

"These Things."

A significant remark has come out of the investigation of the "Black Legion" in Michigan. Said a 22-year-old member in the course of a questioning to fix responsibility for the murder of a Detroit laborer, "A fellow hardly knows how he gets into these things."

No doubt the experience of many unthinking "legionnaires" has been similar. And therein lies the insidiousness of "these things." It is impossible to explain by any process of reasoning the evidence indicating that two prominent Detroit judges attended a meeting of the terrorists, one of them to take the initiatory oath, and that a church was regularly used as the headquarters of one of the bands. Not only men whose limited intelligence might excuse them, but persons of substance and position as well, have been found connected with the nefarious movement.

Of course, it is entirely possible that many of these latter joined when the aims of the organization were still vague. The fact that one branch bore the name of the "Wolverine Republican League" tends to support this assumption. A candidate for the United States Senate addressed this body (which has since been shown to have had no G. O. P. connection) under the impression that it was a legitimate political venture, and several others have testified that they had the same conception of the organization when they joined it.

Two members have admitted, however, that the "Americanization" tenets of the "league" first attracted them to it, both being interested in putting down communism. There is a moral in this admission—one that has been already illustrated with striking conclusiveness in other parts of the world. Mussolini rose to power in Italy by playing on the popular fear of communism, and in Germany Hitler owes his present position to a similar strategy. Wherever there is dictatorship it is usually justified by a cry against some subversive group. Fascism feeds on just such fears, whether they are real or imaginary. And in too many instances the consequences of trumped-up fears are more disastrous than would be the conditions at which fanatics direct their undercover attacks.

Labor At The Crossroads.

The struggle within the American Federation of Labor between the representatives of the large industrial unions and the heads of the older entrenched craft unions is rapidly approaching a crisis. The executive council of the federation has ordered the United Mine Workers and other affiliated unions to dissociate themselves from the Committee for Industrial Organization in which John L. Lewis is the moving spirit. The refusal of the mine workers to obey this pre-emptory order may result in their expulsion and the secession of a large group of unions dissatisfied with the A. F. of L. leadership.

If the long-predicted breakup should materialize, it will be due in large part to the short-sighted, unimaginative strategy of the men who dominate the councils of the federation. In its order to the miners' union, for instance, the executive council denounced alleged attempts "to impose the will of a minority upon the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor, contrary to decisions arrived at in conventions by majority vote." But mere adherence to the traditional majority viewpoint will provide no solution for the problems confronting organized labor.

Like any other democratic organization, the A. F. of L. must abide by majority decisions. But that fact merely emphasizes the responsibility of its leadership to sponsor adjustments that will adapt unionism to the present day needs of mass production industries. If the A. F. of L. wishes to be the standard-bearer for a growing, progressive type of organization, it will have to make allowance for the rapid change in the structure of our economic society. The desirability of liberalizing organization rules is especially emphasized by the prospect of expanding the federation's membership among the unskilled and semi-skilled thousands employed in mass production plants.

There is ample room within the A. F. of L. for both craft and industrial unions, if the responsible leaders of each faction are prepared to observe the rule of "live and let live." If one group seeks by weight of votes or superior strategy to impose its will upon the other, however, the superficial "unity and solidarity," to which the executive council of the A. F. of L. attaches such importance, will be a very ineffectual protection against revolt and disintegration.

John L. Lewis and his followers have not created an issue in demanding greater freedom to organize along industrial lines. Their intransigeance has simply emphasized the inevitability of such organization. The A. F. of L. may resist the trend to its own cost; it cannot alter the course of events.

In Germantown.

Had this been the best of all possible worlds, Washington's visored and sneakered thousands who daily swarm the city's tennis courts would be perched in a spectator's stand just north of Philadelphia. As it is, however, most of them are probably contenting themselves with radio and newspaper accounts of the scene. The world being what it is, and with television still dawdling about the laboratories, this is the closest they can come to a view of the American zone Davis Cup matches between the United States and Australia.

At the Olympic Games, only individual achievements are considered; there is no official scoring by teams. Yet the world focuses its interest mainly on the relative standings of the entrant nations. In opposite fashion, the Davis Cup matches are based only on team play. Yet, curiously, principal attention is given to individual accomplishments.

Thus, when Bitsy Grant was passed over again this year in selecting the American team, many an outraged supporter of the little Atlantan was heard to mutter. Others, just as devoted to Wilmer Allison, were quick to point to the records of past seasons to show that the 31-year-old Texan grows progressively better as the summer advances. Similarly, Crawford's stamina, Budge's youth, Quist's backhand and Mako's doubles court strategy all come in for exhaustive debate.

And in each case these personal factors serve to intensify the interest in the Germantown spectacle.

If this country wishes to learn how many really believe in preparedness, it might try supporting the War Department through voluntary subscriptions.

The heat of a political campaign invariably warps a lot of platform planks into grotesque shapes.

Middle-Class Fighters.

Dr. Goetz in The Commonweal.

Farmers, urban middle-class men, and professional people fight for a traditional standard of existence and very often for bare existence. They face the loss of class standing, of social prestige—risks which are new to them as a social group, if not new to them as individuals.

They have the proud feeling of being or having been the cultural basis of the country and its social and economic backbone; hence they are not willing to yield mutely and without a struggle. They link their fate to the great traditions of the country, to its best deeds and achievements. They claim to represent the spirit, the soul of the country; their decline is its breakdown. The middle classes in all our western countries abundantly display . . . the nationalistic appeal.

Cathedral Appeal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I call the attention of your readers to the effort now being made by a group of laymen in Washington under the leadership of Mr. Lloyd Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., to build up the annual membership constituency of Washington Cathedral. This effort has already reached about four-fifths of the way toward its goal of $25,000, and has secured some six hundred of the thousand members sought locally. But I am sure that there must be hundreds of people in Washington who have not been reached personally by members of our committee, who, if they realized the need, would be glad to contribute to support the work and worship of the cathedral on Mount St. Alban.

They are proud of it because it is one of the most beautiful buildings in America. They are proud of it because it stands for Christian unity, welcomes to its services members of all denominations. The cathedral, crowning the highest land in Washington, typifies the Christian idealism which is one of the inspirations of our national life.

May I ask all who are interested to help us carry on a work which is for all those who live in the vicinity and all those who are temporary guests in the National Capital to send either membership pledges or subscriptions for the year beginning June 1 to me personally or to the cathedral. We hope that a few persons of means may be interested to give large sums, but we consider it even more important to build the number of small subscribers, people willing to become members of the National Cathedral Association after they have fulfilled their commitments to their own parishes and churches. All those subscribing $2 or over receive that beautiful illustrated quarterly, the Cathedral Age, which gives world-wide news of interest to all Christians.

I hope this letter may rouse the interest and the sympathy of many in Washington and elsewhere. Help us to make the cathedral a source of spiritual power to the Capital and to the Nation.

W. R. CASTLE,
President, the National Cathedral Association.

Religious Liberty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

After reading the "Comment on Refusals to Salute" in The Post of May 26 it seems to me that most of the letters miss the point. It is not a question of whether the sect called "Jehovah's Witnesses" are reasonable in their attitude. Most of us will agree that they are mistaken. The real question is do these people in refusing to salute the flag intend to be disloyal to their government. This does not seem to be the case. Are Quakers considered traitors because for religious scruples they refuse to fight? We are coming to a pretty pass when we cannot see the motive behind the deed. These people are no more disrespectful to the flag than are the non-Episcopalians disrespectful to the cross in an Episcopal church who do not bow their heads when the cross passes by. If it were not so pathetic for the children it would seem almost ludicrous to make such a mountain out of a molehill. In New England children refusing to salute the flag were actually sent to a reform school. The school board should have been sent instead. In many schools it is customary to say the Lord's Prayer. Should children of agnostics or atheists be forced to do this? Do let us get our sense of humor working and see the thing for what it is, an odd interpretation, to be smiled at possibly, but not scoffed at and certainly to be repeated as everyone's religion should be in this land where there is supposed to be religious liberty.

Italian Humanitarianism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The many reports about Italian barbarism have made me realize my duty to recall the various humanitarian attitudes the Italian government has displayed in the years of 1919, 1920, 1921 and up to the date for the war-stranded and persecuted refugees.

The Italian mission was the first to reach famine-stricken Austria. The Italian government did not only give to war refugees the free transportation on their railroads and steamship lines, but also provided each transport with a member of the mission to protect them and make traveling easier for them. The hospital in Trieste gave me a section for them and furnished the proper nourishment to build up their undernourished bodies for the long sea voyage. They were provided with clothes and other necessities. Each Italian city they passed made indelible marks of its hospitality. They provided trucks and motor cars for them to travel in comfort, and all at the expense of the Italian government.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Congratulations on your splendid editorial, "Running True to Form," and the classic cartoon by Elderman, "Before the Bar," depicting German justice a la Hitler. Also a word of commendation on Felix Morley's enlightening and splendid article from London.

Surely such fine work takes one back through the years to the day when The Post was mentioned only with the best of the country's papers, to the Golden Age of your profession. We thank you. J. M.

Postpone Conventions?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Shorn of politics, in plain, blunt English, why not postpone the two national Presidential conventions and let Congress hammer into some semblance of completeness this session's work? Emergency, these flashing days, justifies many marked innovations. It is due the great unheard mass of the electorate who cannot have kept pace with the rush, that they be presented a definite program, be given a clean bill of fare to read over before ordering.

Nor should what has to date been done by Congress that is sound and acceptable lose its force and effect by the omission of contributory essentials yet lacking. Ill-considered haste is, of course, apt to eventuate in loss to any cause.

If the campaign committees of the two parties can agree upon a two or three weeks' postponement of the convention dates, its benefits to the country will be incalculable! A midstream position is not conducive to rapid recovery!

The people en masse will surely forgive that slight depletion of the volume of campaign oratory. They'll get enough. GEORGE E. GARY.

F. B. I.'s Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

An excellent example of bureaucracy is the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which within a few years has grown from a minor section of the Department of Justice to a great independent bureau with almost 2,000 employes. Arguments can logically be made in favor of this bureau but such arguments might be made with equal force in favor of hundreds of other possible bureaus.

The detection of a few kidnapers is desirable, but is the price, monetary and otherwise, too much? The stress on these minor occurrences is all out of proportion to their relative importance. The Washington activities duplicate those of the States and the tendency is to take away from the States and centralize great power in Washington. We do not have a homicide bureau so why have one for a handful of kidnapings?

It is well known that the laws under which the bureau operates are in some respects beyond our Constitution and that they widely depart from the American and English principles of jurisdiction. But most important is the fact that this bureau marks the beginning of a kind of organization that inevitably brings unpleasant consequences to the people of the country.

I predict that the people will call for the abolishment of this bureau and if it evolves as such bureaus have always evolved in other countries the day is not far away.

Unfortunate Publicity.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir:

I am in hearty accord with the letter of the Rev. A. J. McCartney which appeared in The Post of May 29 about Zioncheck. Why give publicity to such election accidents and bring the reputable members of Congress under general criticism?

Cannot The Post take the lead by ignoring Zioncheck, or at least by not quoting the remarks he makes for publicity and by not printing pictures of him or his bride?

Against The Canal Speedway

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If a non-native may put in chirp, it would be to say "Roberts is right." William A. Roberts, I mean, the people's counsel, who is to be praised for acting as supreme court against incursion of "modern ideas" that would thoughtlessly destroy the canal. His horse 'n' buggy esthetic is, of course, to be deplored by the truly progressive!

Folks of the type who are never out of their cars unless pitched out by a crash or the installment collector seem to think it is a crime no new motor speedway is built wherever one may be dung down. Your National Parks Commission can always be depended upon to get hold of the wrong idea and plug it to a disastrous finale unless blocked in time. Proving the concrete complex, long at work in the streets and parks, is not dormant. Changing the canal to a racetrack is a sample, even if the canal is grabbed without recompense and the commission's will inflicted. Why the rush, why the hurry? Why a broad new slaughterway to Cumberland, anyhow?

Think of that serenity wrecked by clashing speedsters and belching sirens and mounting record of killings and maimings! The canal bank shoud be improved instead from Georgetown to the first lock, but no engineers, planners, architects or concrete walks, please! The canal is the only place, aside from railroad tracks, where one may walk or ride a bicycle without contesting the monopoly of the motor car, and to a degree escape the idiotic and unending screech of horns by impatient inmates who so beautifully typify "nothing going nowhere."

Should the motor age diminish with oil supplies—by no means unlikely—and yield to a saner, more virile and natural era, it may be well to have the canal. It may work again—as a canal. It has happened recently, especially in the Middle West, where they were about to scrap their canal.

The struggle from superficiality back to naturalness is typified by growing appreciation of the bicycle, which would reach the European stage except for the hoggish grip of the motor car.

Not a sentimental old roofer talking, but a hard, tough, vital widely traveled goof under 30. One who drives for necessary transport, without thinking the "cah" earth's greatest glory. There's such a thing as too much automobile, and America has gone the limit along that route.

The viaduct by all means, but save the canal.

The Post Impressionist

"And Bright With Swords"

Post Office, Monday.

SOME relatives of ours have been piously visiting those academic groves in New Hampshire where our adolescent mind and body were perfected for the struggle with life. And, in the course of their letter to us, describing what these visitors had seen there, occurred the following phrase:

"We passed through the gym—and, if you please, found several pairs of boys fencing!"

If we please!

Your Columnist's first reaction to that was a mystified wonder as to why the fact of any number of boys fencing should require an exclamation point. Then, however, our sense of reality reasserted itself and recalled the modern paradox:

Here, in sports-loving America, of all places, comparatively few people go in for fencing any more.

Oh, yes, our country is represented in the fencing events of the Olympic Games—more or less unsuccessfully.

Oh, yes, there is a bit of fencing done at Annapolis and West Point—just enough to keep the letter of the art breathing in those institutions.

And—oh, yes—there are a few erratic people in such cities as Washington and New York, and a few boys in such schools as St. Paul's and a few colleges, who are taught to handle a foil.

But, when you've said that much, you've about wound up America's little ball of yarn, so far as fencing is concerned.

Why?

Do you want romance in your games?—When you play with a sword, you are using the weapon of all the d'Artagnans that ever were.

Think of the history of fencing:

The art came in when gunpowder blew armor out. Before that, sword-fighting was mere hacking. But then "it was discovered that, though the edge might be useful, the point"—vide master-swordsman, A. R. Hamilton in the Encyclopedia Britannica, no less—"got home far more quickly."

* * *

Time was, too, when the sword was shield, its duty to keep the other man at a distance, or ward off his blows, until you could close in and terminate the business with that dagger which you held in your left hand. Time came when the dagger was discarded, when the sword was made a weapon of both defense and offense; the birth of the riposte, "by which," again to quote authority Hamilton, "the lighter sword-blade not only turned aside, but, in one continued phase of movement, replied to the enemy with a thrust that followed almost instantaneously upon the frustration of his original attack."

So:

Are you looking for a serious form of exercise? Fencing is founded upon the issues of life and death.

Or are you looking for fun? There's none better than fencing's.

Skill and coolness, daring and caution? Let fencing, while it quickens your brain and eye, make deft your wrist and discipline your temper.

Hard work? Tennis is, in comparison, one long vacation. Only the other day, Paul Gallico wrote of fencing in Vogue and Vanity Fair: "If you are not in shape, it kills you. When I have finished a lesson and a few bouts, I am wringing wet from head to foot."

Yet fencing is by no means one of those sports wherein, to attain proficiency, you have to start young. It's better to start so, but it's best to feel that your education isn't complete until you have learned fencing. Gallico says he didn't begin till he was 37.

Fencing ought to be the favorite after-hours relaxation of the tired businessman. When, with a foil in your hand, you are facing an opponent with a foil in his hand, you haven't a chance of thinking about anything else in the world.

And fencing ought to be especially popular in these days because of its cost. As Gallico puts it: "Five foils and a mask can be purchased for the price of a first-class tennis racket . . . Jacket and gloves are cheap, and, once the beginner has had sufficient instruction . . . any room in the house will do."

Moreover, this Columnist is a believer in fencing for the business woman and every other sort of woman. It takes small account of sex. Perhaps first-rate male fencers fence better than first-rate women fencers; but, in the lower ranks, in the glad little army of fencers-for-fun, men and women are 50-50.

Indeed, the frank Gallico says that, if either sex has a shade of advantage, it is the so-called weaker, "because a woman's natural deceitfulness comes in handy at the foils." She "will give you an angelic smile that completely disarms you—and then (she will) stab you." Or women fencers "will droop a little at the mouth, and you begin to feel sorry because you think they are getting tired and maybe you had best let up a bit; at that point, they stab you again."

What was that those people wrote? They "passed through the gym—and, if you please, found several pairs of boys fencing!"

If we please?

We are very much pleased!

The King's Yacht.

(The late King George's world-famous racing cutter, Britannia, winner of more races than any yacht in the world, will be saved from the junkyard and sunk at sea, as the king wished.—News item.)

Down to the depths you reel and plunge,
To feel the breeze no more—
To know no warmth upon your decks,
To see no sunny shore.

Fishes will play where monarchs strode,
And through portholes now green
With weeds the eel and crab will stare
As if at some strange scene.

Black waters through thy ports will wash
To rust thy parts once grand;
Queer creatures of the depths will take Possession and command.

Stripped of your sails, your beauty gone,
You sleep upon the mud,
No more to leap with rising winds
And through the whitecaps scud.

Not only sailormen knew you;
Your pictures went afar.
The world had come to know your form
From keel to highest spar.

Green waters once poured o'er your rail . . .
I still can see you . . . lord,
It seemed but yesterday you flew
The sea with king aboard!

How sad it seems to think of craft
Below in ocean graves,
What irony today to say
"Britannia rules the waves"!

And yet the junk pile you are spared
By George's last decree;
He loved you like a sailorman
And gave you to the sea.

Perhaps ships, too, possess a soul,
Each hull an empty shell,
And through the spray your spirit sails
Where all is bright and well.

Britannia! . . . Yes, there's the name! . . .
I see your sails extend. . .

Month Of June

By William Lyon Phelps.

Inspiring To Poets.

June is a good month almost anywhere except at Cape Horn, where there are no really good months, and June has the distinction of being one of the worst. It is usually agreeable in England, only in 1935, when we were in London from the first to the twenty-second of June, it rained every day except one. In our 48 States June is beautiful; in our Hawaiian Islands it is good because there every month is fair, and in Alaska the days are mild and so long the month itself seems like one fine day.

* * * *

The poets have always been inspired by June. James Whitcomb Riley, one of the best of the weather-poets, because he drew his observations from nature herself, said in his poem called Knee-Deep in June:

Tell you what I like the best—
'Long about knee-deep in June,
'Bout the time strawberries melt
On the vine;—some afternoon
Like to jes' git out and rest,
And not work at nothin' else!

As a matter of fact, if every month were June, not much first-rate work would be accomplished; the finest intellectual work of the world has usually been done in unpleasant climates.

George MacDonald wrote:

The roses make the world so sweet,
The bees, the birds have such a tune,
There's such a light and such a heat
And such a joy in une.

* * * *

June in the country was celebrated by the Irish poet, Katharine Tynan, as follows:

O you poor folk in cities,
A thousand, thousand pities!
Heaping the fairy gold that withers and dies;
One field in the June weather
Is worth all the gold ye gather,
One field in June weather—one Paradise.

Yet our New York poet, Charles Hanson Towne, said:

How softly runs the afternoon
Beneath the billowy clouds of June!

For June is June in both country and town.

Dust Bowl Blooms

Rains In Kansas Bring Green Back To Stricken Area, Thereby Losing Roosevelt Votes, According To Observer.

By Hilding Siversen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

St. John, Kans.

ONE DAY the culmination of a four-day dust storm—the next day the croaking of millions of frogs and the upspringing of flowers, green grass and battered wheat stalks. This transformation literally took place almost overnight, for the writer happened to be at Garden City, in the heart of the "dust bowl," just in time to see what the natives believe to be the turning point in a climatic cycle.

There had been a four-day dust storm. The dust had not originated in western Kansas, for there had already been enough rain to start vegetation a-greening, and already a more hopeful spirit pervaded southwestern Kansas. From Topeka as far west as Pratt the wheat looked wonderfully lush and promising. As far west as Dodge City there were occasional good fields of wheat. West of Dodge City the counties would probably raise enough wheat to reseed the country. In the irrigable portions there were beautiful fields of alfalfa and beets.

Then came a general rain, while the writer watched, at Garden City. There were 4 inches at Dodge City, 7 inches at Liberal, and amounts ranging from 2 to 6 inches all over the territory known as the "dust bowl." The rain came gently, without washing, and did the maximum amount of good. And then was seen a miracle which, to the person unacquainted with this territory, seems utterly fantastic and impossible.

Outlook Had Appeared Hopeless For Future.

THE WRITER had traveled through this district several times during the drought years. Each time the prospect seemed entirely hopeless. The flowers that once extinct. Even the tough, drought bloomed on the vast prairies were resistant buffalo grass was dried up. The plains were utterly lifeless. Everywhere was a vast expanse of dry, baked soil, glaring back at the sun day after day through countless days of pitiless aridity.

Once before, a year ago, as noted by the writer, there had come rains which had given hope. But they turned out to be only a forerunner. They were not sufficient to revive the crops and produce good yields, except in spots.

Beginning in the last part of April, or the first part of May, this year, there were rains. Again it seemed as though a change had come. But these rains were only a good starter, and they were too late for the winter wheat. The real transformation was to come later.

We traveled eastward out of Garden City and retraced the route taken two days before. In that short space of time the once bleak hills had changed to a brilliant green, in which gleamed the creamy flowers of yucca and wild portulaca and scores of other flowers, some yellow, some red, some blue. Buffalo grass was sending up shoots at a great rate. Frogs were croaking and toads came out upon the paved highway in great numbers. Mud was everywhere.

Rains Brought Change In Farmers' Psychology.

I TALKED with farmers along the way. They were just like flowers and the grass—exuberant and optimistic as ever. In a flash they had practically forgotten the four or five year drought and were planning to go out into the fields as soon as they were dry enough, to plant thousands of acres of "row crop," which is the broad term for kaffir corn, milo maize, cane and other similar items, useful for fodder and for seed, which can be fed like corn or other grains to hogs and poultry.

Such crops are less spectacular than wheat, but make practically as much money in the long run. Then there will be wheat planting in the fall, for there is a firm belief that the corner has been turned and the semi-arid plains will see a return of a cycle of ample moisture and good crops. Such has been the history of the past, and there is not an old-timer in southwest Kansas today but who believes that there is a good time coming.

The miracle of upspringing vegetation after a long, copious rain in a semi-arid region is no less remarkable than the revival of optimism. The people who settled this country are incredibly tenacious and courageous. They have seen years come and go, with many repetitions of dust storms which have blotted out all vestiges of vegetable life, and piled huge drifts of black soil against the sides of their houses and in the fence-rows. And yet they have held on with bitter determination. They would never be moved about the country like checkers in a system of regimented economy. Waiting, year after year, they have scanned the horizons. Disappointments have been many. But in their valiant hearts hope has never died. It is a most inspiring record of high courage.

Remarkable, also, is the disappearance of practically all evidences of the dust storms. From his reading of newspaper and magazine accounts, the Eastern reader probably imagines that there is nothing left of the country except sterile clay interspersed with piles of dust. While traveling through the very heart of the dust bowl I saw no evidence of any serious damage to the land surface. Only the looser soils were affected, and the silt lies so deeply that the amount removed is negligible and really imperceptible. Believe it or not, southwest Kansas today shows practically no effect of the black blizzards and the whiplash scourging of the eternal winds.

Deluge Seen Taking Votes From Democrats.

"ROOSEVELT lost a lotta votes when this rain fell," said a garage man at Dodge City, after the rain had been going on for the third day.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"I mean just this. The people of this country were might glad to get Federal relief. They know it didn't come from Roosevelt or Wallace. They'll have to pay it back with interest them 'n, some day. Nobody's kiddin' them. They were glad to get it, all right. They were just as much entitled to it as the people of a flood area. It was an emergency. But they look at it as a relief measure—not a means of cutting down crops or managing farms—don't forget that!

"Of course they don't mind going through the motions of cutting down crops when they don't have any crops. It's either a feast or a famine out west of Dodge. They all take a gamble and they know it. They either get nothing or they get a good yield. When rains come and there's a right smart chance to get a good wheat crop, the Government men had better keep off the into the ground every grain of farmers' premises, because those farmers out there are going to sock wheat they can get and raise as much as they can.

"They've been markin' time for five years now, and they're itching to make up for lost time. That's why crop control in western Kansas is all nonsense. When there's a failure one year and a big crop the next, you can't control production by any planning or Federal bossing. So the Roosevelt scheme won't work when it rains. This is Landon weather."

He shook the rain out of his hat and went back to work.

Anyhow the old timers said they had never seen as big a rain as this one. It has worked a transformation in the "dust bowl," all the way from the Smoky River down to the Arkansas Valley, and along the Cimarron, and down into the Panhandle country, and out into the foothills of eastern Colorado and New Mexico to Clovis and the mesa country. The flowers are blooming again. Nobody knows how the seed or the roots survived, but there they are. If you don't believe it, go out and see for yourself.

Detroit Parley To Form Third Party Is Urged

Convention Not Later Than Sept. 5 Recommended by Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 31.—A call for a convention to organize a national third party at Detroit "not later than September 5" was recommended today to a conference of third party advocates.

The proposal came from a committee of 15 after a night of deliberation. The committee represented minority political and labor groups of the Nation.

A flood of counter proposals greeted efforts of conference leaders to hold discussion on the committee's report to an hour and a half.

David Lasser, New York, secretary of the Workers Alliance of America, presented a one-man minority report advocating that instead of calling a convention, the conference seek the support of organizations whose members were conferees.

Farmer-Labor Group.

J. B. C. Hardman, of New York, member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, proposed that the Minnesota Farmar-Labor group, sponsors of the conference, be left in charge of further developments.

Amid a tangle of parliamentary procedure, the conference recessed to permit State groups to study recommendations.

Eighty-three delegates and 11 visitors from 22 States were registered as the conference opened its second day. Representative Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, appeared after sending a letter the first day saying he could not be present.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, came to Chicago, but did not appear at the morning session.

Sentiment in favor of a third party appeared strong, but how to effect it brought new suggestions with every speaker.

Epic Is Explained.

E. McLarty, of California, explained the epic (end poverty in California) movement and urged the conference to consider it.

W. C. Irby, Jacksonville, Ala., asked that the Townsend plan be made a part of the movement.

Maurice Campbell, of Springfield, Mass., said the third party must not include members of other parties; that unless all were willing to support the party's program it would be useless to ask them to go along.

Representative Lundeen insisted that the scope of the new party must be broadened. He urged third party leaders to go before leaders of other groups, if necessary, to bring them into the fold.

A plea from Gov. Floyd B. Olson, Farmer-Labor leader of Minnesota, for a third party convention, but no candidate for the Presidency this year was read to the conference yesterday.

Promise of the full support of the Communist Party came from Earl Browder, general secretary of the party in America.

Running Mate

to an end the great national deficits through the balancing of the Federal budget without further delay. The Republican (Democrat) Party pledges a prompt realization of this end. The object should be achieved to the fullest extent possible by rigid economy in all branches of the Federal Government consistent with the efficient discharge of the essential functions and obligations of the Government. If, notwithstanding strict economy, a deficit still remains in prospect, the only recourse must be additional taxation and the Republican (Democratic) Party pledges itself in that event to impose additional taxes sufficient to balance the budget, recognizing that the achievement of a balance between receipts and expenditures of all kinds is paramount."

The National Popular Government League prefaced its pamphlet with a statement signed by 28 Senators and 70 Representatives. The statement recalled that four years ago many members of Congress "warned the American people that the utility and banking interests were quietly working to control the nomination and election of candidates for the Presidency and Congress." The signers said they now repeated that warning.

Charge Utility Lobby

The statement charged that "back home" utility lobbies are active among the votes.

"They seek to manipulate the nominating and election machinery without regard to party, and usually employ concealed methods," the statement said.

The members of Congress further charged that through legal manipulation in the courts the utility interests were attempting "to postpone and frustrate either effective regulation or public ownership, undertaken in response to public demand for low rates."

"The power war is by no means ended," the statement said. "The efforts of private corporations to minimize its importance and deflect public attention must not prevail. It must be carried forward in this election, and all elections, until the American people are masters in their own house, and until they shall be freed from exorbitant and unjust charges, and until electricity shall be supplied to every urban and farm home in America at rates the people can afford to pay."

The following Senators signed the statement: Bachman, Tennessee; Benson, Minnesota; Black, Alabama; Bone, Washington; Brown, New Hampshire; Bulow, South Dakota; Caraway, Arkansas; Costigan, Colorado; Donahey, Ohio; Frazier, North Dakota; Hatch, New Mexico; Holt, West Virginia; La Follette, Wisconsin; Long, Louisiana; McGill, Kansas; McKellar, Tennessee; Minton, Indiana; Murray, Montana; Norris, Nebraska; Nye, North Dakota; O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Pope, Idaho; Russell, Georgia; Schwellenbach, Washington; Shipstead, Minnesota; Thomas, Oklahoma; Truman, Missouri, and Wheeler, Montana.

Philadelphians Schedule Fetes For Convention

Democratic Delegates to See Boxing Matches and Midget Auto Races.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 31. — Everything from a scrapple breakfast to a top-flight heavyweight boxing bout is on the program of entertainment announced today for the Democratic National Convention beginning June 23 in Municipal Auditorium.

The citizens' committee on arrangements disclosed the myriad of events on the crowded schedule, which actually begins two days in advance of the political assembly.

Mayor S. Davis Wilson will greet visiting Governors at his reception Monday, June 22, on the eve of the convention, and the same night Leroy Haynes and Al Ettore, Philadelphia heavies, will mix it up in their boxing wind-up.

Open house will be held by 16 country clubs in the area for the delegates who reach Philadelphia Sunday before the convention.

The scrapple breakfast to women delegates opens the entertainment program of convention week proper on Tuesday morning, and on the same day Mayor Wilson will receive visiting mayors. A concert in Robin Hood Dell, followed by midget auto races at Municipal Stadium, are other extra-curricular activities the visitors may indulge in the first day.

A memorial breakfast to William Jennings Bryan and a mardi gras celebration on the broad parkway in the evening color the Thursday program.

Valley Forge, shrine of American Independence, will be the sightseeing objective on Friday, followed by the Youn Democratic ball, an international ice skating carnival, and a Robin Hood Dell concert.

Notification ceremonies at Franklin Field Saturday evening, at which President Roosevelt is expected to accept the nomination for re-election, overshadows all events that day, while a rowing regatta on the Schuylkill will offer diversion on Sunday.

Four Are Rescued After Boat Upsets

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 31 (AP). Four persons who fought the storm-whipped waters of Great Salt Lake for four hours today, after their boat capsized, were rescued by the Salt Lake County sheriff's "one-boat navy."

Caked with dried salt, bruised and near exhaustion, the four were picked up by a power launch midway between Antelope Island and the lake edge. Those rescued were Adrian Smith, 23, and Paul Madsen, 21, University of Utah students; Marlow Branagan, Salt Lake Tribune sports reporter, and Helen Woodhead, attractive 21-year-old nurse.

The same gale and rollers which had overturned the craft, righted it later and the four had clambered back aboard.

Adjournment proved projects now pending can participate on a 30 per cent basis.

"Further, these cities are the ones bearing the brunt of the unemployment burden. The Senate Appropriations Committee does not seem to realize that the United States Treasury is saved hundreds of millions of dollars on a program in which the cities are willing and legally able to put up 55 per cent of the cost, whereas if this is not done, the Treasury will have to pay all of the cost under the WPA.

"This is short-sightedness to the nth degree. Hence, the responsibility for not accepting the 55 per cent of the share of the cost of employing people can fall upon the Senate Appropriations Committee, where is rightfully belongs."

It was stated that New York has available $72,500,000 in PWA projects and is legally willing and able to pay 55 per cent of the cost of their construction.

Even when the Senate has passed the deficiency bill there may be a serious dispute in conference because the Senate bill differs radically from that passed by the House. The House bill gives all the money to Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, while the Senate bill turns it over to President Roosevelt. The Senate bill provides for continuing the Florida Ship Canal, and the House bill does not. Neither does the House bill make any provision for the PWA.

The program now calls for consideration of the tax bill to begin in the Senate tomorrow.

A minority report carrying a substitute for the tax bill as it has emerged from the Finance Committee will be presented by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, and Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin. The report will urge retention of the present corporate tax of 12½ to 15 per cent, with graduated levies on undistributed earnings up to 30 per cent.

The majority report will provide for corporate income levies ranging from 15½ to 18 per cent with a surtax on undistributed earnings and raising surtaxes on individual incomes of over $6,000. The House bill, which more nearly expressed the views of the President, had provided for a graduated tax up to 42½ per cent on corporate net income, depending upon how much of it was withheld from distribution as dividends. Each plan, it is estimated, would raise about $620,000,000.

Unless some word is received from President Roosevelt indicating he would not reject the Senate bill, a prolonged disagreement between Senate and House is in prospect.

Republicans will confer tomorrow on their stand upon the tax bill. The conference has been called by Senator McNary, of Oregon, minority leader. The Republicans, while disapproving both Senate and House bills, are expected to have less objection to the Senate bill.

Two other measures still involved in conference disputes are the Interior appropriation bill and the District of Columbia appropriation bill. Unless Congress is able to agree on taxes and relief there is little possibility of passing a ship subsidy bill, the new Guffey bill and food and drug legislation.

Chapter Nine.

"Increasing The Poor Man's Taxes."

"It is so easy to live on borrowed money, so difficult to realize that you are doing so."—Stanley Baldwin.

We set out, you will remember, to examine the validity of the "At-least-he-has-tried" argument in the light of three specific questions—unemployment as a relief problem, unemployment as a recovery problem, and the relation of both to Government spending and taxation. In the preceding articles we have dealt with the first two. It now remains to examine the third.

Here again I shall not repeat what I have previously said about past performance, because a majority of the American people have, during the past year, become aware of the extraordinary discrepancy between what Mr. Roosevelt promised to do in fiscal matters and what he has done; because they have become aware, I think, of the danger that lurks in what has been done, and because—knowing these things—they are primarily interested in what Mr. Roosevelt will do if he is re-elected.

Mr. Roosevelt's wishes in regard to this problem are, I think, clearly discernible. In some respects they seem very complicated. In others they seem very simple.

Let us take the simple ones first.

1. Quite clearly the President does not wish at this moment to balance the budget.

This must be either because he does not want to increase taxes to a point where they would defray existing expenditures, or because he does not want to reduce expenditures to a point where they would be met by existing taxes.

Why?

As to the first alternative, because one would almost have to double the present tax burden in order to meet the current rate of expenditure; because the President probably knows that to double, or approximately double, the present tax burden would raise the cost of living, arrest recovery and very nearly bring business to a standstill, and because the President certainly knows that a drastic increase of taxation would be extremely unpopular.

The latter reason would seem sufficient by itself to warrant the assumption that Mr. Roosevelt will not pursue this course.

As to the second alternative, namely, that of reducing expenditures—Mr. Roosevelt believes, and would have us believe, that huge Government spending is a virtue in itself, and that we are coming out of the depression largely because of the huge Government spending that has taken place. (This is the well-known theory of the British economist, J. Maynard Keynes, with which I have dealt elsewhere and need not dissect here. It was not accepted by the British government. But it did find a ready market in Washington. It underlies the whole Public Works program.)

That is one reason it is unlikely that Mr. Roosevelt will want to cut expenditure so that it can be met by current taxation.

But there is another and more convincing reason:

What do you suppose Mr. Farley would say if the President seriously made any such proposal in an election year?

Since neither of these two alternatives seem likely to be taken by Mr. Roosevelt—and since any combination of the two alternatives would be subject to the same distasteful realities—I think it is fair to say that Mr. Roosevelt does not wish at the present moment to balance the budget.

2. It is equally clear, I think, that the President does not fancy himself in the role of the greatest peacetime spender of borrowed money in our history.

His economics may be imported, but his conscience is still influenced by his American ancestry.

For one thing, he knows that his fiscal record is one of the weakest spots in his armor, because the country, as a whole, has given ample evidence that it fears a continuation of reckless extravagance and resents the political capitalization of distress.

For another thing Mr. Roosevelt is aware—or should be aware, since he has been frequently reminded of it—that he made a certain very excellent speech in Pittsburgh, on October 19, 1932. This was not the only occasion on which Mr. Roosevelt spoke of taxes and Federal expenditure during his campaign, but it was perhaps the best speech he made on this subject.

Among other things he said on this occasion that:

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors."

He made it very clear that in his judgment no system could be devised which would actually "soak the rich," but that, on the contrary, taxes would always fall most heavily upon the poor.

He made it abundantly clear also, as he did on other occasions, that no government could afford to spend more—no matter how worthy the reason—than it could raise by taxation; that liberal governments were "all too often wrecked upon the rocks of loose fiscal policy;" and that, cost what it might, he would pledge himself to "stop the deficits" and "reduce the cost of Federal Government by at least 25 per cent."

No matter how deftly he may rationalize the repudiation of these promises—no matter how ingeniously he may seek to becloud the issue by claiming that those who would hold him to his promise would like to "dictate to the Government how it shall let people starve"—Mr. Roosevelt knows that he is not fooling the majority of the American people.

Mr. Roosevelt knows that his broken promises and repudiated principles will rise up to meet him at every turning in the campaign, and therefore his second wish, I think, is clearly this:

He would like very much to look as though he wanted, and had always wanted, to balance the budget.

He would like very much to have people believe that his record of piling up some $13,000,000,000 of deficits is due to unforeseen circumstances over which he had no control, to a spendthrift Congress, to droughts and floods and tornadoes—to anything except his own doing.

He would like very much to have people believe that, so long as he is President, they can keep on annually receiving the benefits of $8,000,000,000 of expenditure and only suffer the burden of $4,000,000,000 of taxation.

He would like, above all, to have people forget what he told them about taxes being paid "in the sweat of every man who labors," and believe that his new tax proposals will hurt only those who are rich and prosperous.

Up to this point, I think, the wishes of the President are fairly clear even to the casual observer, though not, of course, if the observer allows his own common sense to become beclouded by the New Deal propaganda.

But from here on the going becomes more difficult. And I confess that, were I in the Treasury, or on the House Ways and Means Committee, or on the Senate Finance Committee, I should have great difficulty—even assuming that I wanted implicitly to follow the President's wishes—in ascertaining exactly what these wishes are and how they could possibly be fulfilled.

Share-Wealth Idea Points Gun at the Rich.

For example:

In January, 1935, the President stated that he did not wish any new taxes enacted in the session which had just begun. In June he suddenly demanded the enactment of higher income and inheritance taxes as well as a new graduated corporation income tax.

His avowed purposes were: (1) to soak the rich, (2) to effect a more equitable distribution of income, and (3) to give the small corporation a tax advantage as against the large corporation.

The first two purposes had suddenly become urgent necessities because, as you will remember, the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement had gained a certain amount of headway and Mr. Roosevelt thought it necessary, or politically advisable, to initiate a little wealth-sharing of his own.

The third purpose was perhaps a little more obscure. It was another expression of Mr. Roosevelt's deep-seated dislike for anything big and strong, and of his desire wherever possible, to "make little ones out of big ones."

But the curious thing about the proposal itself was that it tended to produce just the opposite result. It tended to penalize the millions of small shareholders in big corporations and to let off easily the few large shareholders in small corporations.

In other words, the gun was pointed at the rich, but, if it had been allowed to go off, it would have missed the plutocrat altogether and peppered the man in the street, full of buckshot. Fortunately, Congress saw this more clearly than the President and only loaded the gun with birdshot and a very small charge of powder.

It seemed as though the President had thus been relieved of a rather embarrassing situation, since the corporation income tax had been "graduated" just enough to save his face, but not enough to do any real harm.

But the relief was short-lived.

When the Supreme Court relieved the President of another embarrassment by invalidating the AAA, it also invalidated some five hundred million dollars of processing taxes, and thereby removed the last vestige of illusion from the budget message of January, 1936.

This message, by the way, seems to illustrate beautifully the President's previously stated desire not to balance the budget, but to look as if he wanted, and had always wanted, to balance it.

Hardly had the Supreme Court done its bit when Congress proceeded to pass the bonus bill—and to repass it over the President's exceedingly feeble veto message. I say feeble, because it had been obvious for months that the so-called "smart thing" for the Administration to do about the bonus was to allow itself, ever so reluctantly, to be compelled to pay it. Thus the legion voters, who wanted prepayment, would be grateful to the New Deal party, and those who opposed this additional burden upon the Treasury—including many patriotic war veterans—would not hold it against the President, since, after all, hadn't he vetoed it?

In any case, the invalidation of the processing taxes and the passage of the bonus once more put the President "on the spot" where he had to recommend at least enough new taxes to make up the deficiency created, or abandon all pretense of wanting to see the budget balanced.

So once again he went to the piano and improvised a new variation on his favorite theme of making little ones out of big ones.

This time it was to be a heavy tax upon undistributed corporate earnings, and the removal of the exemption from normal tax of corporate dividends.

Individuals and partnerships pay an income tax and surtax on their earnings, whether distributed or not, so why should not corporations do the same?

And why should big fat corporations not pay out all their earnings to their shareholders instead of getting bigger and fatter by accumulating a part of them?

And why should big, fat stockholders in big, fat corporations be allowed to duck their surtaxes by allowing part of their earnings to remain undistributed and therefore out of the reach of the tax collector?

Thus ran the argument.

"These taxes will get some real money out of the pockets of real people," said Mr. Olyphant, the Treasury tax professor.

He was quite right. They will.

But the "real people" will not be the "bloated tax-dodging plutocrats" upon whom the learned Mr. Olyphant has fixed his gimlet eye.

They will be "the real people" in quite another sense of the word—the people who toil for their daily bread—the people who are thrown out of work when there is a depression—the people whose interests Mr. Roosevelt once seemed to understand so well when he said that "taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors."

C. of C. Attacks Bill to Replace Guffey Coal Act

Price-Fixing Provision's Workability Doubted by President.

Opposition to the Guffey-Vinson bill, intended as a substitute for the Guffey law declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, was expressed yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers.

Pointing out that the new bill is the old act [illegible] labor provisions removed, Harper Sibley, chamber president, said:

"The legislation now proposed is based upon the idea of the Federal Government imposing price-fixing. As a result of experience with codes under the national industrial recovery act, the chamber's membership has expressed its opposition to the imposition of such codes by Government fiat. This new bill, like the first Guffey act, imposes a detailed code upon the industry."

Feasibility Doubted.

Sibley said that workability of the price-fixing provision is doubtful. He said price-fixing has invariably proved unsuccessful where applied to types of business that are widespread and complex.

Speaking for the Manufacturers Association, James A. Emery, its general counsel, declared that "if there was any one phase of the late, happily departed NRA that was generally discredited it was the fixing of prices through codes."

He pointed out that inasmuch as the manufacturing industry is the Nation's largest user of coal, any increase in coal prices would increase the cost of manufacturing.

Monopoly Charged.

"The proposed bill," he said, "in effect seeks to create the greatest monopoly in the history of our country, a monopoly controlling the price of a basic commodity. Through price control, it seeks to control production."

Emery said the new bill does not meet the objections of the Supreme Court.

"The arbitrary, legislative fixing of maximum and minimum prices might, from the standpoint of the individual, be all right in Utopia," he said. "But any governmental control means political control, and the benign politician of today might become the dictator of tomorrow."

Attempt to Muzzle Huge Snake Proves Perilous to Cleveland Pair.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 31.—Frank J. Loughney, 47-year-old herpetologist or reptile expert, stroked the neck of a 28-foot regal python in a makeshift reptile house today, muttering words intended to make it docile.

Cliff Wilson, 45, owner of the python, was close by, awaiting an advantageous moment to slip a muzzle over the snake's mouth, preparatory to bathing it. That moment never came.

Suddenly the python struck from half its length. The snake battled the two men for 45 minutes, and stopped only when three friends, two of them snake experts, and two policemen pulled the coils from about Loughney's body and legs and Wilson's hand from the python's mouth.

Sew Up Fingers.

Attendants at Charity Hospital sewed up three fingers of Wilson's right hand and treated all but one of Loughney's fingers for deep cuts. They suffered no broken bones.

"It's green, that's the trouble with it," said Wilson. "But I never had one attack me just like that before. Another hour and a half and we both would have been dead."

Max H. Kimerer, of Miami, Fla., one of the three friends who rescued the pair, said "There were a lot of people around but everybody seemed scared to do anything, for which you can hardly blame them.

Afraid of Shots.

"We were afraid the police would shoot the snake, but G. A. Lyons and I put them to pulling at the coil around Loughney's legs and Markell and I went after the loop around his body."

Markell is Albert Markell, who lives with Lyons.

Ten minutes later Loughney, who was scarcely able to move, was freed. He, Kimmerer and Lyons, of suburban Lakewood, then pulled the snake's mouth open enough to allow Wilson to remove his hand.

The snake, weighing 200 pounds, was one of nine reptiles, including boa constrictors and one other python, which the men intended to exhibit at the Great Lakes Exposition.

"Now we not only have to wash it," said Loughney after his wounds were treated, "but we have to get in its mouth and see if Wilson's hand loosened any of its teeth. These things are delicate, you know, if they aren't properly cared for."

Trinity Graduates Warned Of Propaganda Against Truth

Baccalaureate Speaker Counsels Senior Class at Services; Class Day Exercises This Afternoon, Commencement Tomorrow.

Trinity College graduates, at baccalaureate services yesterday morning in their chapel were warned against the "persistent propaganda against truths which we regard as central in all education."

"They (the truths) are labeled as superstitions," declared the Rev. Dr. William H. Russell, of Catholic University, who delivered the sermon, "They are referred to as hangovers from the day when man was ignorant of natural science. In hundreds of graduation exercises this year they will not so much as receive honorable mention."

Dr. Russell said there are two actors in American life "which cloud the vision of the young in regard to the function of religion in education."

First, the desire for new things colors our national outlook. Second, "professors of publicity" contend that Catholic dogmas are manmade and are not scientifically up-to-date, the clergyman declared.

"In the midst of the turmoil of the time, the Immaculate Mother and Her Son calmly reign above the altar of Trinity's Chapel. Outside the restless American, ashamed of the old, finds himself disgusted with the new as soon as he tries it. In fact, modern man, while crying out against the unchangeable dogmas of the Catholic Church, is nevertheless unconsciously seeking some absolute, some unchangeable to which he may cling."

The Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, was celebrant of the baccalaureate mass, and the Rev. E. J. Jordan, of Catholic University was archpriest.

Seniors and alumni, many of whom have returned to the Trinity campus for a commencement reunion, were given an informal reception by the faculty yesterday afternoon, and a Senior Serenade was the event of the evening.

Class day exercises will be staged this afternoon, and degrees will be conferred at commencement exercises at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, will confer the degrees, and Jane M. Hoey, director of Federal grants to States under the social security act, will give the address.

Hundreds View May Ceremony Of Holy Trinity

Procession in Georgetown Followed by Services; Rite Colorful.

Hundreds of spectators lined Georgetown streets yesterday afternoon to witness the annual May procession of Holy Trinity Church.

Chief attractions of this colorful religious ceremony were the queen, Frances Halloran, and her imperial court. The queen marched through the streets with a long lace veil held by two small children, Peggy Kilbridge and Patsy Delaney. Her prince was Owen [illegible]maurice.

Leading the procession of six divisions was the contingent from the Holy Name Society headed by the Rev. Andrew Graves. The Holy Comforter Band provided the music.

More than 100 boys and girls were in the first communion class which received the sacrament earlier in the day. The parade was followed by services in the church. The Rev. J. J. Gallagher, S. J., preached the sermon.

Mailman to Quit After 46 Years

Alvin Powell, one of the oldest letter carriers in Alexandria in point of service, will be retired on June 30, after a service of 46 years and 6 months. He started as city carrier under Postmaster W. W. Herbert, on December 24, 1889, and has served continuously. The postmasters under whom he has served, in addition to Herbert, have been Charles C. Carlin, Park Agnew, Joseph L. Crupper, Thomas Burroughs, J. Armistead Eggborn, Dr. William M. Smith, F. Clinton Knight and the incumbent, J. Owen Lynch.

When Powell entered the service the free delivery had been in operation only two years, and there were but four letter carriers. There were four wards in the city, each of which had a letter carrier assigned to it.

There were no civil service requirements for entrance in 1889, and when, later, carriers were required to have a civil service status, Powell was "blanketed" into the service, under the late Park Agnew.

London Business Man Urges International Trade Checks

Wilfrid Hill Would Implement Hull's Reciprocal Trade Treaties With Scheme of Milhand, Geneva Economist, for Goods, Services Barter.

Wilfrid Hill, London business man, reached Washington yesterday on a tour to win American business men to a "two-way" trade plan, which he says is gaining momentum in Europe.

He has come as the vice president of an association of Europeans interested in perfecting a means of international exchange. In Washington he will lay the plan his group is proposing before heads of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"It is now generally accepted that the misguided policy of refusing to buy and trying to sell has created most of the economic troubles in the world today," said Hill. "Post-war history has proved beyond doubt that no country can enjoy stable prosperity in isolation."

The Englishman said Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade policy was "the one and only way to stabilize prosperity."

Hill's group advocates implementing that policy to make it more effective. Specifically it is proposing the plan originated by a Prof. Milhaud, political economist at Geneva University.

The plan would provide for government issuance of "international purchase cheques" to be used by nations exchanging goods. They would entitle the person who receives them only to claim goods, or services—no gold. The notes, to have of definite span of validity, would be returned to the country issuing them, in return for its produce.

World trade, according to Hill, is handicapped by high tariffs, and by the fear of nations that they will buy more than they can pay for, and of having a deficit in the foreign balance. This fear, he said, is based on a false conception of the nature of money—"that it has an intrinsic value and functions independently of goods and services."

The "purchase cheques" were designed to eliminate this fear.

World trade, Hill declared, is all important.

"To reorganize the economic life of the world on a primitive basis is not theoretically impossible," he said. "Such a course, however, involves the acceptance of a lower standard of living than would otherwise be possible, and puts the development of an important export trade out of the question."

Little Rock, Ark., May 31. (AP).—St. Francis County authorities tonight appealed to Gov. J. M. Futrell to send national guardsmen into the county to prevent what they termed possibility of bloodshed in clashes between striking Southern Tenant Farmers Union members and plantation owners.

The appeal come from County Judge E. A. Wolfe and Sheriff J. M. Campbell as union strikers moved under cover of darkness to take up picketing posts at several plantations in the county to force their demands for $1.50 per day and a ten-hour day for chopping cotton.

Howard Class Told Education Teaches Faith

Dr. Johnson, in Baccalaureate Sermon, Cites Benefits of University.

Before an audience of 3,000 seated yesterday on the campus at Howard University, Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, preached the baccalaureate sermon incident to the sixty-seventh commencement of the institution. He discussed the university, the enlargement of the [illegible] a single teacher, giving [illegible]sophy of life in various spheres of activity and a faith by which to live.

Candidates for graduation were advised to go to work as quickly as possible, without regard to remuneration offered, with a view to the "central secret of victorious living, the aid given to man to help him to a higher level."

"I know that you need a fine place to work in," he said, "with the best environments available, but if you had the best contacts ready, they would not be sufficient to give you life. There are many who have these contacts who would sacrifice all to have in their mind the vision that you have today.

"If I were an American white man today, and I wanted to be sure that my life would count, I would go as straight to the Negro people as I could and cast my lot in their disadvantaged ranks. The Negro American leads a life of great adventure. On the ground floor of American life, he knows there is nothing further down, that there is no danger of falling because there is no place to fall, that every step he makes must be progress because there is no other way to go than up.

"In the first stage of our educational battle, we produced college graduates to demonstrate what the Negro might accomplish in life. Today we need no such demonstration. We have ample confidence, not only because of educational attainment but also because of our painters and sculptors, our lawyers and doctors, our pugilists and runners. We have reached another stage.

"We must see what these vanguard exponents of our capacities can do with the whole people if they will spend their devotion in trying to make them a great people. Our task in the next 70 years is to penetrate every section where black people live, with every form of intelligent man and woman to take care of every phase of life of the people. This is the great task of making a country."

Students were cautioned to beware of early success, and the aim for personal success, and advised to think of the cause of mankind and the way to aid that cause. The invocation and response were said by the Rev. W. O. Carrington, and scripture reading by the Rev. W. Y. Bell. The Rev. E. C. Smith pronounced the benediction.

Key West Thankful For $4,300,000 Aid

Key West, Fla., May 31 (AP).—All the churches of this "orphan city" held thanksgiving services today for President Roosevelt's approval of a $4,300,000 public works loan to rebuild the "oversea highway" to the mainland.

Announcement of the President's action yesterday meant not only that this little island city would have its communication with the mainland restored. It also meant 18 months of work for hundreds now unemployed and a share in Florida's rich tourist industry.

The Rev. Shuler Peele, secretary of the Key West Ministerial Alliance, ordered the prayers of thanks in the churches and arranged a telegram to the President in the name of the 1,100 Methodists of the city, saying "the action spells a new day for a distressed but hopeful community."

ace when the guard units poured up the hill.

The National Guards were encamped in El Campo De Marte when Sacasa issued a decree dishonoring rebel provincial officials who had been installed in four departments. Sacasa also nullified all contracts entered into by the new officers.

Shortly thereafter, machine gun fire broke from the national guard ranks, aimed at the President's guard of honor atop the hill. Intense firing continued for more than half an hour, followed by two hours of rifle fire which finally grew desultory.

Since early morning National Guards from Leon have been storming Fort Acosasco, commanded by Maj. Ramon Sacasa. Government reinforcements had been sent to the fort yesterday in anticipation of an attempt to capture the fort.

Success by the rebels in commanding the army fortress would give them command of Leon, and possibly several points.

Gen. Somoza showed his hand as leader of the revolt when he demanded that Maj. Sacasa surrender the fort. The commander, under jurisdiction normally of Somoza, refused, curtly stating he was henceforth taking orders only from the President.

Somoza then hurried into nearby Leon and dispatched National Guards from there against the fort. Tonight the government still was safely in control.

Federal Review Finds Business Expanding

Business activity is being maintained at a level substantially higher than a year ago, the Department of Commerce says in its weekly review.

The weekly statistics reveal a seasonal slackening in manufacturing this month, but the output will be considerably higher than in May, 1935. The dollar volume of retail sales is also running well in excess of that of a year ago. Sales of a leading mail-order house for the four weeks ended on May 21 were 29 per cent ahead of the corresponding fiscal period of 1935, showing about twice the relative gain of the preceding four-week period.

olic press, he declared, is one of the best forces in this fight.

Observers recalled that much of the controversy between the Vatican and Germany, where a pagan movement recently has gained strength, has centered around the Catholic press. The Pope recently organized a world Catholic press exposition.

"I recommend it "the Catholic Press) above all to be used constantly as the most powerful auxiliary of Catholic Action," Pope Pius declared. His listeners interpreted the statement as an exhortation to support the Catholic Press in its campaign against "Nazi paganism" and the "red menace."

Urged to Pray.

The pontiff repeatedly urged members of the Catholic Action Organization to pray. He delivered a benediction to the bishops, clergy and laymen of Catholic Action.

One hundred American delegates and 23 cardinals attended the mass, celebrated by the dean of the Sacred College, Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte. The Pope seemed weak, but followed the ceremony attentively.

Before the Pontiff left the basilica the cardinals wished him "ad multos annos"—(a long life).

The traditional blessing by the Pope outside the basilica was omitted in order to prevent overexertion by him.

The Pope's birthday fell on one of the most solemn of the church's festivals, Pentecost, and this fact added to the celebration.

Honors Pontiff.

By the Associated Press.

William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston said yesterday "distrust and hate and suspicion" among nations would vanish if rulers would listen to the teachings of Pope Pius XI.

In a radio address honoring the Pope on his seventy-ninth birthday, the cardinal said "time and time again, as history clearly proves, warring and discordant nations have been united in peace and harmony through the salutary influence and guidance of the chief pastor of Christendom."

country from which we have drawn so many of the qualities which make us great."

Sir Percy Bates echoed this sentiment, saying: "The Cunard Line is delighted that the American Ambassador selected the Queen Mary for this trip to the United States. Every Englishman honors Ambassador Bingham's skillful work to better Anglo-American relations, and every one connected with the line is happy that he honored us by his participation in this historic voyage. I hope it may prove a harbinger of even better relations between two nations whose interests are mutual in so many fundamental matters."

In spite of 11 hours of heavy fog, the Queen Mary logged 678 miles from noon Saturday to noon today, making the average speed for the entire trip up until noon 29.15 knots.

Tonight the fog is gone and the huge liner is racing toward New York at a speed well over 30 knots. The perfect weather has raised hopes that the Queen Mary will overcome the handicap of the fog and arrive in New York with a new record for the Atlantic crossing.

Emphasize Safety.

Sir Percy and other Cunard officials, however, are more pleased than downcast by the fog and the consequent delay. The essential objectives of the Queen Mary, they explain, are not records but absolute safety, plus an ability to maintain like clockwork a 4½-day schedule. Nonetheless, the Queen Mary's record-breaking abilities have been abundantly demonstrated on this maiden voyage.

Throbbing engines intensify the great excitement in every quarter of the huge ship tonight as passengers and crew look forward to arrival in quarantine tomorrow morning. In one form or another the sentiments expressed by Bingham are echoed by all passengers.

N. Y. Prepares Greeting.

New York, May 31 (AP).—A sky, land and water greeting awaited the new liner Queen Mary as Great Britain's transatlantic pride ploughed westward tonight at speeds estimated to bring it into the harbor early tomorrow afternoon.

In addition to the 12 work-a-day tugboats that will puff down the bay to ease the huge vessel into a new $5,000,000 pier in the Hudson, there will be dozens of official and other craft in the welcoming fleet at Quarantine.

Standing room in Battery Park and at various piers in North River was expected to be at a premium, with many persons utilizing high windows and roofs of waterfront office towers for a landsman's view of the arrival.

Two giant airliners, carrying plane company and radio executives, were scheduled to soar overhead to transmit a sky welcome from amid dozens of smaller aircraft.

Steamer Chartered.

Two thousand members of British clubs and societies chartered a special steamer. The official city cutter was reserved for Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and a committee headed by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia University president.

Three, instead of the usual one, Coast Guard cutters were assigned to take customs and immigration officers and reporters to the side of the ship at quarantine.

Included in the Cunard White Star flagship's cargo were 1,500 ounces of platinum, enough for the rings of more than 1,000 June brides, consigned by a London refinery to a New York metals firm.

The line estimated the ship would reach quarantine about noon (Eastern standard time) and dock at 4 p. m. Her return to Cherbourg and Southampton was set for 10:30 a. m. Friday, with a series of receptions aboard ship to fete her officers and builders during the interim.

Davis Is Ready To Start Tour Of Farm Belt

AAA Administrator Will Go Into Midwest for Talks on U. S. Policies.

By the Associated Press.

Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, prepared yesterday to leave the Capital for a month's tour of the farm belt to speak on the Administration's agricultural policies.

He returned Friday from an European study of farm programs and announced he would not resume active direction of the AAA soil conservation program at this time.

Three Midwestern addresses have been scheduled for him and officials said other dates were under consideration. The administrator will speak at Des Moines, Iowa, June 3; at St. Paul, Minn., June 5, and at Urbana, Ill., June 15. Another engagement in the South is being considered.

Administration sources said Davis was expected to spend most of June in the field discussing the farm situation, and studying results of the soil conservation program. Davis said his addresses "will be agricultural," but he added that political aspects could not be overlooked because of the connection between the farm problem and the Federal Government.

"I am going to talk about the various proposals for farm relief," Davis said, "and how I think these proposals will work for our problem. I am going to speak in the light of my experiences abroad."

In talking with newsmen after he reached the Capital, he spoke strongly against use of export subsidies and two-price systems for farm relief, saying it would be impossible to "jimmy" exports into foreign nations.

Davis told reporters that import restrictions imposed by foreign nations would prevent success of a two-price system under which a high price would be maintained for products consumed in this country with the surplus being sold on world markets for a lower return.

"Anybody who thinks a million bushels of wheat would disappear on world markets simply by attaching to them an export subsidy," he said, "would be saddened by the result."

Starhemberg Maps New Step To Seize Reins

Tells Plans at Heimwehr's First Meeting Since Austrian Coup.

By the United Press.

Vienna, May 31.—A new thrust by Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg ousted co-dictator, to capture control of the Austrian government, was in the making tonight.

Starhemberg, Premier Benito Mussolini's protege, intends to accept the present situation only until the opportune moment for a counterthrust by his private army, the Fascist Heimwehr, against what he terms "mendacious and corrupt democracy," headed by Chancellor Kurt Schusnigg, the peasant leader Josef Reither, the Catholic trade unionist, Leopold Banschack, and Mayor Kollman of Baden.

Starhemberg revealed these plans at a meeting of Heimwehr leaders, the first such meeting held since Schuschnigg's bloodless anti-Fascist coup.

Starhemberg considers Schuschnigg's assumption of the position of national commander of the fatherland front as an illegal act.

He himself still occupies this position and will reassert his rights at the proper time, he told his subordinates, instructing them at the same time to pass the information down through the Heimwehr rank and file, numbering about 120,000.

Meanwhile, presumably in anticipation of internal trouble or a possible Nazi putsch, government armament contracts are being rushed at top speed.

Army Strength Cited.

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria, in a copyrtighted interview with the Paris Soir today, said the government forces, including the army, police and voluntary organizations, are capable of dealing with any putsch.

He hoped Germany would not attempt any aggression against Austria, and added that the Rome agreement is still effective, indicating Austria counts on Italian help in case of aggression.

He reiterated Austria's position against anti-Italian sanctions.

3 Iron Miners Shot In Alabama Strike

Birmingham, Ala., May 31 (AP).—Three iron ore miners were wounded tonight in a pitched gun battle at Muscoda mine of the Tennesse Coal, Iron and Railroad Co., shortly after union leaders announced a strike in shafts supplying ore to Birmingham steel mills "is on."

Chief Deputy W. T. Kemp, of Bessemer, said the three wounded men were members of the "Brotherhood" Union which had declined to join the walkout ordered by the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

A. E. Horn, district president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, said approximately 2,000 men voted to strike in protest against substitute of tonnage pay basis for the hour system previously in effect.

Garrett Park Graduates Hear Father Hogan

Need Feel No Inferiority in Modern World, 'Prep' Students Told.

Catholic youth need fall no inferiority in contact with the modern world, the Rev. Joseph S. Hogan declared yesterday in delivering the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of Georgetown Preparatory School at Garrett Park, Md.

Like the Jewish youth in Ben Hur, he can feel that his church has had a background of culture and history that reaches far back beyond the modern "isms," Father Hogan said. He told members of the graduating class they have not completed their education, but are upon the threshold.

The Catholic parent also has an obligation to see that his children are given a Catholic education, he said.

Mass Is Celebrated.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered at mass in the chapel of the school. The mass was celebrated by the Rev. Henri J. Wiesel, president of the school, assisted by the Rev. Edward B. Berry and the Rev. James O'Hara. The choir, directed by Brother Oswald, sang the responses and music for the mass.

The annual father and son golf contest Saturday resulted in a tie between two Washington fathers and their sons for first place. They were Dr. Ed Cummings and Ed Cummings, jr., and Dr. William Dettweiler and Jack Dettweiler. Second place was a tie, with two New York families winning the honors. Tom E. Murray, jr., and Jim Murray, and James McDonnell and Jim McDonnell.

Mass for deceased alumni preceded the golf tournament, and the father and son banquet was held at night with Father Wiesel and members of the faculty as guests.

The annual elocution contest will be held Friday at 8:30 p. m., followed by presentation of athletic prizes, while the senior class will hold its banquet Saturday at the Hotel Mayflower.

Assistant Attorney General John F. Crosby will deliver the address to the graduating class, which includes his son, John Francis Crosby, jr., Sunday at 3 p. m. at the school.

Convict Dies

Lindsley's rifle fire. They poured lead across the top of the ravine so fast that it was difficult for Lindsley to aim. To this they believed they owed thier lives.

They were within a few feet of Lindsley when the convict's rifle jammed and he shot himself through the heart.

Lindsley had $2.60, one shotgun shell and seven rifle cartridges in his pockets when his body was examined. His face was covered with beard. His curly black hair was matted, his eyes were circled and he appeared almost exhausted from his four-day flight through swamps and woods.

The trail of death left by the youthful criminal began Wednesday afternoon when he cut the throat of Mrs. Cecile Himel, wife of the prison captain he served as a yard boy, when she repulsed his advances.

He left her body lying in the bathtub and waited several hours for her husband, Nelson J. Himel, to return home. He shot Himel to death, seized Himel's revolver and money and escaped in Himel's car by telling guards at the prison gate he was "running an errnad for the cap'n."

The next day, possemen looking for him killed William Wade, 21, a deaf youth dressed in clothing similar to Lindsley's, when Wade did not halt at their command. Then two prison foremen were shot by a fellow posseman who mistook them for the fugitive. Capt. Tom Fluitt, one of them, died Saturday. Charles McCrory, the other, is recovering.

8 States Hunt Son of Banker, Missing Month

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—William Webster Theile, 15-year-old son of a Wall street investment banker, was disclosed by a family friend today to have been missing since May 3.

Police and private detectives, unable to trace the youth, have been quietly investigating the possibility that he might have been kidnaped.

His parents discounted the kidnaping theory, however, and expressed the opinion he may have grown tired of school and gone in search of work. They said he had taken all of his savings, $40, before leaving.

The family spokesman, Miss Bissell Brooke, said young Theile dropped out of sight after leaving his home in Mamaroneck, Westchester County, to keep a tennis engagement with friends.

A son of William Theile, president of the Atlantic Investing Corporation, and Mrs. Theile, he was described as a direct descendant of Daniel Webster.

Miss Brooke said no ransom demands had been received.

Young Theile last was seen by the family chauffeur, who drove him to an apartment house in Pelham, where he was to have met the friends with whom he was to play tennis.

From that point on his movements remained a mystery.

The chauffeur, who returned home after leaving him at the apartment house, said he appeared normal and cheerful.

Detectives, learning that the missing youth had once attended a "dime a dance" hall in upper Manhattan, have been watching the place without result.

His mother, the former Ima Green Webster, of Siloam Springs, Ark., was reported on the verge of collapse.

Young Theile was to have been graduated from the Rye Country Day School in June. He held the high jumping championship there, and had been enrolled at Hotchkiss School, in Connecticut.

When he left home he had $40 in cash, and was dressed in a brown suit, with white pin-stripe, a white shirt, and brown suede shoes.

Legislature Asked For Long Inquiry

Baton Rouge, La., May 31 (AP).—The Louisiana Legislature was asked tonight to investigate the fatal shooting of Senator Huey P. Long.

A concurrent resolution was introduced in the House by Representative Ben R. Simpson, of Caddo Parish, calling for legislative creation of a six-member commission to investigate the fatal wounding of Long in the Statehouse the night of September 8, 1935.

The resolution provides for the appointment of three members of the commission by Speaker Lorris M. Wimberly of the House, and three by Lieut. Gov. Earl K. Long, brother of the Senator and presiding officer of the Senate.

Simpson said his resolution was conceived independently and was not a proposal of Gov. Richard W. Leche's administration.

After Long was shot his friends and political followers said he was the victim of a conspiracy, but no results of any investigation have been announced officially.

Former Magistrate, Wife Are Murdered

London, Ky., May 31 (AP).—Robbers murdered former Magistrate Reed Taylor and his wife at their store in Keavy, Ky., 10 miles from here, last night while their baby slept in their home nearby. They threw the mother's body in the hog lot.

Apparently Taylor was roused from bed on some pretext and shot when he got to the store. Mrs. Taylor went to see what the shooting was about and was killed when she entered the store.

The Taylors were about 60 years old. They left a baby son and a daughter, Dora, who was recently married.

Be Sure the Refrigerator You Buy Today has a "Sealed" Mechanism... one that has been proved by experience!

Consider these simple facts: the first hermetically sealed refrigerator mechanism was developed and introduced by General Electric in 1927. It revolutionized refrigeration costs. Others have followed, but the record of the General Electric sealed-in-steel THRIFT UNIT for dependable performance at lowest cost has never been approached by any other cold-making unit ever invented.

Basically unchanged but constantly improved, the famous G-E sealed-in-steel THRIFT UNIT now produces double the cold with even less current then ever before.

Because of the unparalleled record of the G-E THRIFT UNIT for dependability and economy, and because of its great public acceptance, other manufacturers have attempted to imitate this matchless sealed-in-steel mechanism. Each year more and more are turning to this type and eventually all electric refrigerators will undoubtedly follow G-E's lead.

To protect your investment make sure the refrigerator you buy today has a sealed mechanism that has been proved by experience. After all, display room demonstrations don't mean so much—it's the kitchen test that counts: Thrifty buyers recognize General Electric's nine years of proof through actual use make the G-E today's best buy.

Choose a General Electric and you can be sure you have the thriftiest refrigerator in the world.

Symphony Unit Demands End Of Music Fight

Showdown Is Sought by Orchestra Members' Committee.

Exasperated by the deadlock between the National Symphony Orchestra Association and the local musicians' union, which has threatened to stop this summer's concerts, the orchestra members' committee asked last night for a public showdown.

In a statement signed by Thomas J. Mullikan, chairman, the committee yesterday demanded a conference to solve the difficulties at which the committee, the orchestra association and C. Marshall Finnan, director of National Capital Parks, would be represented.

The association and the union have been embroiled in a long controversy over the importation of musicians here and the expulsion by the union of George Gaul, the orchestra's personnel manager.

The association has set today as a deadline for the union's decision on whether it will discuss personnel matters. On the basis of the union's reply, it will decide tomorrow whether or not to carry on the concerts this summer.

Mullikan's committee, which represents neither side of the controversy, is composed of musicians in the orchestra who fear they may lose their employment this summer.

His statement read in part:

"If the association is sincere in its statement that they believe real difficulties exist in the way of these concerts, a belief which, to us, has no foundation in either fact or theory, we invite the association to meet the orchestra committee in a joint conference, a conference to which we also invite the director of public parks, Mr. Marshall Finnan.

"We must also insist that, inasmuch as the association has adopted the policy of making a dispute such as this public property, and as the association has looked to the general public for the support of our orchestra, the public be represented by the press at this proposed conference."

Syrian Church Prelates Here To Visit Parish

Legate, Aid to Go to White House to Interview Roosevelt.

Two leaders of the Syrian Orthodox Church—one of them the representative of the Patriarch of Antioch, the other the new Archbishop of New York and North America—arrived in the Capital yesterday to be guests of Washington Syrians.

His Eminence Theodosius, who is known as the Metropolitan of Tyre and Sidon, as well as the legate of the Patriarchate of Antioch in America, is paying visits to Syrian parishes throughout the country.

He brought with him the Most Rev. Antony Bashir, the newly made Archbishop of New York.

Both of the prelates conducted services yesterday, in Arabic and in English, at St. George's Syrian Church, and will remain in the city through Tuesday, when they have an interview with President Roosevelt at the White House.

His Eminence, known to Syrians over the world as a scholar, orator, historian and theologian, has represented his church at conferences throughout Europe for the last 10 years. He made his first trip to America last August to supervise the general diocesan nomination for a new archbishop.

Three candidates were nominated, and their names forwarded to the Holy Synod at Damascus, Syria. The synod on February 5 elected the Rev. Bashir to succeed the late Archbishop Victor Abo Aassaly.

Theodosios consecrated the new archbishop in New York April 19. Archbishop Bashir, who will have charge of all Syrian Orthodox churches in North America, has been accompanying His Eminence on his visits through the country.

Archbishop Bashir is one of the youngest men in his church to occupy a position so high. He was born in 1898 in Douma Liban, Syria. He received his education in Syria, and was a professor at the University of Beirut. In 1922 he came to the United States. For the last four years he has been pastor of St. George's Syrian Orthodox Church in Detroit.

The two men will go to Montreal Wednesday.

1,000 Attend Testimonial To Maj. Berry

Industry Co-ordinator Is Tendered Dinner at Willard.

Roosevelt Among Hundreds Sending Their Felicitations.

A thousand men and women, some of them from as far as California, attended a testimonial dinner at the Willard Hotel last night for Maj. George L. Berry.

Maj. Berry, who began life in Tennessee as an orphan boy selling papers and doing odd jobs about a printing office, was honored in his dual role—president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America and Co-ordinator for Industrial Cooperation.

The testimonial dinner was not a political event. However, when Maj. Berry announced he had dedicated his life to carrying out the idealism of President Roosevelt, the applause reached a peak for the evening."

"Not Going Backward."

"We are not going backward," Maj. Berry said. "We are not going to gamble away what we have achieved on a return of the so-called prosperity of 1929."

President Roosevelt, among hundreds of others, sent felicitations to the man who recently began his twenty-ninth year as head of the printing pressmen's organization and who now, in addition, is working for the Roosevelt Administration to bring about co-operation between industry and labor.

President Sends Greetings.

The President's letter said:

"My dear George:

"I am delighted to hear that a group of your friends and admirers—among whom I desire to be numbered—are tendering you a dinner next Sunday night.

"I desire to associate myself with those who thus would honor you and offer sincere felicitations and all good wishes on this happy occasion."

Called to the microphone by Toastmaster Edward W. Edwards, member of the Industrial Board of the State of New York, the following paid tribute to Maj. Berry as a man, a patriot—he served in both the War with Spain and the World War—and as a labor leader and public officer:

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama; Senator Nathan L. Bachman, of Tennessee; Representative William P. Connery, jr., of Massachusetts; Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor; John L. Lewis, pesident of the United Mine Workers of America; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Thomas E. Burke, president of the International Union of Plumbers and steamfitters of America; John C. Payne, industrial chairman for the Council for Industrial Progress, and the Right Rev. John Ryan, of Catholic University.

William E. Becker, Chairman.

William E. Becker was chairman of the general committee in charge of the testimonial dinner. Joseph C. Orr was treasurer, James L. Monahan, secretary, and Lyle A. Brookover, assistant secretary.

The committee also included:

Andrew Armstrong, John Badaracco, Thomas Bateman, Norbert Berger, Jacob B. Boscoe, James H. Brooks, Martin Brueshaber, William Burrows, Joseph Byrne, Cliff Cole, Joseph A. Dart, Anthony J. DeAndrade, H. Dela Ross, Tom Drew, Joseph C. Dunn, Thomas E. Dunwody, Thomas Etzrodt, Cornelius Falvey, Vincent J. Ferris, Michael A. Flinn, Ben Gates, I. H. Goldberg, Edward W. Gordon, Sidney Hillman, Otto Huber, Albert Hunter, John J. Kane, Stephen G. Kelley, John S. Lewis, Harry Listman.

Jungle Indians Deify Plane, Exhibits at Smithsonian Show

Institution Has Five Carved Pieces of 'New God' Brought to Washington From Choco Indians in Central America by Capt. Anderson.

Alongside symbols of the sun, the moon and the stars, the airplane now sits as a god in the temple of a primitive people dwelling in the jungles of Central America.

The Smithsonian Institution now has actual evidence that flying has been deified. In its exhibit it has five planes, elaborately carved from balsa wood. They were brought back from Central America by Capt. K. S. Anderson, of the United States Army.

The Chaco Indians, whose spiritual lives are untouched by civilization, made the models. They had watched the planes drone over the green jungles of Central America.

They worshiped flying.

Scientists say the Chacos are using the planes for magic purposes—for healing the ill.

They predict that the planes will become the Chacos' ranking diety if its healing powers prove better than the sun or the moon which the tribe worships.

How the Indians were able to reproduce the planes in accurate detail, how they were able to distinguish the insignia on wings as they soared a thousand feet above the jungle remains a mystery.

Scientists think probably the models were made from a plane which made a forced landing in the jungle.

New Life-Guard Test Devised By Employe of White House

Ira Lee Law, who works as a White House guard for a living, studies law with the hope of becoming a politician, and teaches young women to swim just for the fun of it, has devised a new test for life guards. And now every person who wants to be a guard at pools operated in the District by the Government will have to pass it.

The test has been approved by the Welfare and Recreational Association, Public Buildings and Grounds, Inc., of Washington, and is being copyrighted.

Law will open a school tomorrow at the McKinley pool, so the prospective life guards may go through the new procedure. Only requirement for entrance is a senior Red Cross life-saving certificate.

The originator of the new test has had plenty of experience with life guards. For six years, from 1929 to 1935, he was in charge of the District's Red Cross first-aid life-saving. He also takes charge of the life guards at every President's Cup regatta.

What about girls as life guards?

"You'd be surprised how good they are," said Law. "They really work at it."

In addition to teaching quicker and better methods of rescue, Law likes to put his swimmers through fancy formations which rival the elaborate dance routines of Hollywood. Sometimes, he admitted, he gets his ideas from the movies. And sometimes, he pointed out, the movies seem to get their ideas from him.

One of the best classes he ever had, he said, was made up entirely of young and pretty nurses who could navigate in a swmming pool as well as they could in a hospital ward. Under Law's direction they used to form triple wheels and other intricate designs. The class has now broken up. Law, however, still teaches first aid to the nurses at Sibley and Garfield hospitals. He also teaches first aid at the District's police training school.

"But I don't have time to teach those boys to swim," he explained.

The school for life guards which opens at the McKinley pool tomorrow will consist of three sessions daily, from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, from 2 to 5 p. m. and from 7 to 10 p. m. Classes will close June 8.

Nearly Score of Homes, Stores Are Ransacked Over Holiday.

One man was robbed, another managed to escape after two bandits leaped on the running board of his car, two men reported their pockets picked and nearly a score of homes and business places were ransacked over the week-end.

Burke E. Long, of Indian Head, Md., was robbed of $115 by two Negroes and a woman early yesterday while he was walking along S street northwest, near Fourteenth street.

Long told police one of the men held a knife against his chest while the other went through his pockets. The trio jumped into a taxicab after Long tried to hold the woman. He said the man with the knife cut him on the hand and struck him on the head with a blunt object. All escaped in the taxi.

A pair of army boots and a quantity of other clothing was stolen from his automobile parked in front of his home, Col. Raymond Westcott Briggs, 2122 California street northwest, reported to police.

Clothing and money valued at $110 was taken from his barber shop at 3551 Georgia avenue northwest, Deamont Nichols, owner, told police. The thieves gained entrance through a rear window which was left unlocked, he said.

An antique shop in the 1700 block Connecticut avenue northwest, was broken into and the place ransacked. The proprietor of the shop said no report of the articles taken could be made until an inventory was made.

Mabel Thomas, 50, of 1319 New Hampshire avenue northwest, told police a restaurant in the 200 block P street, where she is employed as cashier, was entered and a cash box containing an undetermined amount of money stolen.

Tools valued at $319 were stolen from a service station in the 4500 block Wisconsin avenue northwest, John P. Healy, manager, told police. The place was ransacked by the thieves who entered by breaking a glass in an office window, Healy said.

Schoolgirls Make Plans For Vacation

Patricia Henry to Attend Olympic Games With Her Parents.

Mary Howes Will Go to Democratic Sessions In Philadelphia.

By Elisabeth C. Taylor.

Thoughts of the coming vacation and plans for either debuts or college next fall fill the minds of the many Washington girls who are being graduated from the private schools this month and next. In a few cases debuts will be coupled with college, and already the graduates are looking forward to a full season of social activity.

Miss Patricia Henry, who will receive her diploma from Holton Arms today, will leave with her parents, Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry, for Berlin, where Gen. Henry will be one of the judges at the Olympic games. One of her classmates, Miss Ann Turner, daughter of Mrs. Thomas C. Turner, is planning the long trip she will take in the fall to enter Mills College in California.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, who was graduated from National Park Seminary Junior College Thursday, will accompany her parents to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia. This is not her first convention, as she also went to the one held in Houston when she was a child. Miss Howes, who is interested in writing and intends to specialize in English and journalism at George Washington University next fall, has at least considered the possibility of keeping a journal of the events of the convention as a prelude to her writing career. In school she has been interested in riding and dramatics as well as writing.

Chevy Chase Graduates.

Three Washington girls who will be among the graduates from the Chevy Chase School Saturday morning are Miss Mildred Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Elliott, and Miss Betty Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl F. Kelly, who will receive junior college diplomas, and Miss Virginia Catlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Catlett, who will be graduated from the high school section.

Among the graduates of Holton Arms, in addition to Miss Henry and Miss Turner, are Miss Edythe Corbin, who, with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Clifford Lee Corbin, and sister, Miss Dolly Corbin, have left for Honolulu, and Miss Eleanor Eccles, daughter of the chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board and Mrs. Marriner S. Eccles.

Several of the young graduates are planning to go to college but have not yet decided which one they will attend. Miss Ann Heine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Heine, who will be graduated from Holton Arms today, has not yet chosen a college. Miss Josephine Penniman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Penniman, also will go to college, and Miss Martha McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal D. McKenna, is trying to choose between Vassar, Wellesley and Smith.

Miss Betty Leach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Leach, plans to go to Connecticut College, and Miss Helen Pickens, a classmate, will go to Duke University.

Miss Christine Moore, daughter of Mrs. Minda Moore, and Miss Marian Nulsen, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles K. Nulsen, will receive honorable mention at the Holton Arms commencement for their term theses. The exercises will take place in the garden of the school this afternoon.

Entertain at Dinner.

Miss Patricia Carron, Miss Anne Milton and Miss Josephine Jones, who are in the midst of graduation festivities at Trinity College, entertained at dinner at the Shoreham Saturday evening in honor of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Carron, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. John Milton, of Jersey City, and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jones, of Huntington W. Va.

Miss Barbara Harris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Harris, who is being graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary this month, is planning to go to DePauw in the fall. Miss Mary Duff, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Robinson E. Duff, a classmate of Miss Harris, is trying to make up her mind between Vassar and Wellesley.

Other Washington girls receiving diplomas this week are Miss Carl Good, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Good, who plans to go to Rollins College in Florida; Miss Jean Gulick, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. John W. Gulick, now stationed in the Philippines; Miss Peggy Jones, daughter of Commander and Mrs. J. Douglas Jones, who is going to Camp Holton for the summer and to Bradford Junior College, Mass., in September; Miss Betty Read, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Albert C. Read; Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant, who is planning on going to Bryn Mawr; Miss Elizabeth Reardon, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John D. Reardon, who will take the school train to Vassar; Miss Mary Katherine Stika, daughter of Commander and Mrs. J. E. Stika, U. S. C. G., and Miss Martha-Wills Schoenfeld, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Schoenfeld. All are graduates of Holton Arms School.

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, Lally, who cannot walk. To support Lally and earn enough to afford an operation which may enable her to walk, Brenda has accepted a job as "siren" for Walter Jason, salesman of questionable mining stock. In a few months Brenda has saved enough from her commissions to pay for Lally's operation. Brenda keeps secret the sort of "work" she is doing as an entertainer of Jason's "customers."

Brenda realizes that Lally has fallen in love with their neighbor, Val Sargent, brilliant young writer who has been kind to Lally largely because he, in turn, loves Brenda. But Brenda, because she knows Lally's secret, has put Val out of her mind. To make it easier to avoid him she accepts from Jason a diamond, which she wears on her third finger, telling Lally she is engaged to her employer. Lally passes this news on to Val.

The ruse succeeds. Val thereafter avoids Brenda, as she does him. Coming home one night from visiting Lally at the hospital where she is awaiting her operation, Brenda and Val meet—in the little automatic elevator. There Val, in spite of the fact that he believes her engaged, tells Brenda that he loves her. Brenda does not answer him but feels that, somehow, she has violated Lally's trust in her. She cannot sleep, remembering what Val has said.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR.

THE NEXT MORNING, Brenda flew past the elevator and took the stairs. She didn't think she could ever take the elevator again. Later in the smart mirrored and chromium elevator, going up to Ethel's apartment, standing beside the neat Chinese boy who was running it, she was nervous. She knew that she had only to close her eyes, and the Chinese boy would be changed into Val, and the mirrors and chromium would be changed into shabby brown sheet metal and unpolished brass.

But she didn't close her eyes. She kept them valiantly open, studied her reflections in the many mirrors, and the reflections of the Chinese boy, and wondered if she would ever forget the calmness of Val's voice as he told her he loved her.

She had she same sensation late in the afternoon when she was going up in a crowded elevator to the ninth floor of the Tower building. She was one of 20 people in the big car, and yet, wedged in by a stout woman and a stouter man, she seemed to be alone in it with Val—and above the chatter of the passengers, there was his voice only which she heard. His voice telling her he loved her.

His voice had followed her around all day. In the morning when she dressed at Ethel's, at noon, when she interrupted Walter and a prospect for luncheon. At the luncheon table when she listened to Walter telling his Mexican story, and the prospect, who was a furniture manufacturer from Grand Rapids, telling his experiences with striking employes. Those words which she had never meant Val to say, and which he had said anyway. Words which had been burning on his lips for a long time.

"I shouldn't worry about them," she kept telling herself when she was taking off her things at Ethel's. "Now that they are said, I should forget them. I was worried before because I was afraid Val would say them. Now I'm worried because he has said them."

She stayed in the office only long enough to pick up a check from Grace and then she hurried out and took a bus to the hospital. She didn't want to see Lally face her, but she felt she had to. It seemed a sacrilege to go in to Lally with Val's words echoing in her ears—words which Lally wanted Val to say to her. It seemed that Lally would be able to hear them, even see them.

Lally Is Alone.

She didn't go up in the elevator to the fourth floor, she walked up the stairs and when she got to the desk, asked her usual question, "Is there anyone in with my sister?"

There wasn't. Doctor Pierce had just left, so she opened the door of 402 with fingers that were trembling. Lally was smiling at her from the bed, and Peter gave an interested chirp when he saw who it was.

Flowers on the dresser and on the table, fresh ones, since she had been in this morning, some roses she had sent, and a bouquet of delphinium and snapdragon Val had sent.

If it had seemed a sacrilege coming into the room, it seemed still a greater one, to stoop over and kiss the soft lips.

Lally didn't notice her nervousness.

"Val hasn't been here today, but I had a telegram from him. He'll be here at 8." Lally proudly pointed to the yellow slip of paper on the bed near her pillow. "Read it."

Brenda obediently took up the message. "The errant but persistent visitor sends his best regards and will positively be present in person at 8 p. m." She thought she knew why he had wired—because he never came at night, and wanted to warn her that he was coming, and when he was coming. He knew Lally would show her the telegram.

"You'll stay now tonight," Lally said, "and it will be like old times."

"I can't, darling. We've a meeting at 8—at the office."

"But it's been so long since the three of us have been together."

"I know, but we'll all be together soon enough."

"What did you hear from your Walter today?"

"A letter and a telegram—he may be gone another week. Something at the mine," she lied.

"And flowers at home, I suppose?"

"Flowers at home." That wasn't a lie, because roses came every day at the Corwin for Brenda, big red American beauties. Sometimes she brought them to the hospital, but this morning she hadn't.

"You said he was going to write me a letter. When the telegram came today, I though it must be from him."

"He'll write," Brenda promised, "and as soon as he comes home, he'll come to see you. He asks me about you in every letter." The subject of Walter was dangerous ground, but Brenda had managed to skid over it very well so far.

At 7:30 Brenda left, not for home because she didn't want to go there. The flat without Lally, and with Val upstairs was getting harder and harder to go to. For an hour she walked, scarcely realizing she was walking, the words she was trying to forget still ringing in her ears.

Finally at 8:30 she went into a restaurant for she had had no dinner. When the food came, she didn't want it, so she paid her check and because she was a long way from home, took a taxi to the Corwin.

Two people were standing by the elevator waiting for it to come down, but Brenda didn't join them. She hurried to the stairs as fast as she could, and walked up. All the while she was plodding up, for she was very tired, she heard the creaking of the elevator cables, and the door in it clicked against its lock, first on this floor, then on that.

"I love you, Brenda. And my love doesn't mean a thing in the world to you. I love you, Brenda." She was going upstairs to the rhythm of the words, but this time her lips were forming the syllables. "I love you, Brenda."

"Stop it, Brenda! Stop!" She cried aloud when she was in her own flat, and the door was closed after her.

The phone rang as she threw her hat on the couch furiously. It was Walter and he had been calling at intervals of 15 minutes all evening, he said. He was coming right out, and they were going to take a ride. Brenda said she would go. At least the ride would take her away from the flat, and Walter's presence might help her forget Val's words.

Walter's presence did no good at all. The words buzzed around her like a swarm of bees for the first half hour of the ride. The last half hour she discovered why the words had mocked her so and she begged Walter to take her home.

"It's not true," she said to the reflection of herself in the mirror in the dresser when she was home. "It can't be true. You wouldn't dare to let it be true, Brenda Fayre."

She loved Val. That was the knowledge and that was the pain. And at that moment when she was looking in the glass, it seemed that she loved him more than she loved Lally, more than she had loved Roger, or her father and mother.

Sophistocates Are Adopting Dotted Swiss

School Girl Fabric Steps Into Realm of Sleek and Chic Gowns.

Dotted Swiss has gone the way of all smart materials—sophisticated! This "sweet and innocent" fabric which has always been associated with small girls' party frocks and graduation dresses has stepped out of its life-long environment and tried the realms of sleek afternoon and chic evening gowns—and with tremendous success.

The Swiss weavers started it all—because of the demand for sheer material with a permanent finish they were inspired to merge the traditional dotted Swiss with crisp organdie. The results are surprisingly lovely and the new Swiss-organdies, which are giving all of the other cotton sheers much competition, are really as practical as they are alluring. Exquisite evening gowns of this novel material combining attractiveness and sophisticated styling are a splendid example of the successful experiment.

The new Swiss organdies lend themselves beautifully to draping as well as the more tailored type of fashioning. Cut-out embroidered organdies of lacey textures are featured in semi-soft finishes that drape well but have enough body to flare attractively in bouffant skirts of floor lengths. Shadow prints in large and small geometrical and flower patterns are striking in their multi-color themes. There are also hand-drawn and drop-stitch effects worked in fine checks or stripes to add fabric interest to dinner and dancing gowns styled along simple lines.

These clever Alpine weavers have seen to it that the new finishes are not only decorative but practical; permanent finishes which insure successful tubbing, embroidered and cut out eyelet work done with color-fast cottons. One of the newest of the new ideas is a St. Gall organdie with a permanent crinkle, which does not require ironing.

The sheer cottons were never lovelier than they are this summer—and never as sturdy and durable. There are just about 1,001 different colors and designs from which to make a choice, and the styles are just as varied and versatile. Yellow seems to be the favorite choice of the younger set, with various tones of pink and blue next in preference. Snowy white is a season's "must," and in the realm of patterns, dots both large and small vie with the more dramatic prints for popularity; the choice should depend, of course, upon the stature and coloring of the young miss.

Swiss Organdie for Dancing

Pin-dotted Swiss organdie in white with maize dots and grosgrain bow and belt of matching hue, fashions this charming cotton sheer for the young girl. For graduation and subsequent dining and dancing throughout the summer, it would be a splendid choice. It is fresh and youthful looking and still has a subtle bit of sophistication in its styling. May wine, poudre blue and navy dots are also available. The frock sells for around $9. For information as to where it may be purchased, call The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, Extension 323.

Snobbishness Toward Maids Is Ill-Advised

Mothers Urged to Train Children to Respect Domestic Help.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. BROWN was apt to speak of her maid-servant as "that dumbbell in the kitchen," or "the nitwit who cooks our meals."

She frequently did this before the children. She also scolded and criticized the girl in the children's presence. Of course she changed maids frequently, until the depression. Then, with places hard to get, the girls were obliged to endure her treatment.

Blamed Maid.

When Mrs. Brown went out, of course, she had to leave the maid in charge. When she came home, she found more often than not that some catastrophe had occurred in her absence. Then she blamed the maid again for not controlling the children.

One day the house had been turned topsy turvy and several things broken as a result of a game of hide and seek. Another day a couple of windows were smashed. A third time the baby had had a bad fall; a fourth there had been a fire which nearly burned up the house.

But in no case was the maid to blame. She had no authority. Whatever control she might have had, had been destroyed by Mrs. Brown's criticism. If the maid attempted to discipline a child or give an order, she was met with this reply:

"We don't have to mind you. You're only a servant. Mother pays you to do the work."

A Great Mistake.

Of course it is a great mistake to inspire and foster so snobbish an attitude in children. House work is dignified, and women have reduced it to its present level by their own attitude of contempt toward it. But more than that, it is actually dangerous to leave children in the care of anyone for whom they have no respect.

Responsibility without authority is an impossible position for anyone. If the person who does one's work is not fit to be respected she is not fit to be trusted.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Effort to Attract Unmarried Men Isn't Worth Bother, Says Divorcee; Gives Reasons Why.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: From time to time young women write your column asking how to get acquainted with unmarried young men in this city. From my experiences and observations in general with men ranging in ages from 25 to 38, I would say the effort isn't worth the bother, although the easiest way is frequently to attend dances, if one is a good dancer.

After a heart-breaking dissolution of my marriage almost two years ago I decided to make myself attractive and get in the "swim" again. Through various means—introductions, meetings at the seashore, church organizations, dances—I have been in the company of 12 or more men. And here is the low-down:

• • • •

1. Every man drinks intoxicants, some in moderations, others to an alarming degree.

2. Very few seem interested in anything but having a "good time," so-called. Most have not been to church for years and do not feel the need of religion in their lives.

3. All are surprised to meet a girl who does not care for smoking or drinking.

4. Most of them tried to find out just how far they could make advances. One, aged 38, proposed that, after dates, we go unchaperoned to his apartment. Two others, around 35 years of age, suggested week-end trips. (Apparently a divorcee is naturally supposed to be a "loose woman.") Of the others, all but three considered a few kisses or "necking" on a dark road due payment for an evening's entertainment.

• • • •

It seems from this study that there must be a great shortage of real men in this city, and that the average type a girl can count on meeting is just flitting from one female to another; that he has no serious object or intention in life, not even desiring real companionship; and is either so egotistic or so concerned for his health that he is not willing to seek out those women one would naturally expect him to turn to if he must indulge in promiscuous and short-lived amours.

• • • •

The average man such a girl is likely to meet wants the privileges of marriage without its responsibilities and if one is to judge from his independent attitude (namely: "If you won't stand for my kind of love-making, some one else will") there must be quite a few girls foolish enough to fall for his line.

Of course I am not saying there aren't any real gentlemen left but I do think they are few and far between, because generally they are taken to the altar by some designing female just as soon as they reach marriageable age.

DIVORCEE.

DEAR DIVORCEE: Rather than make any effort of my own either to affirm or to to deny your findings with regard to the conduct and philosophy of unmarried men in Washington, I have decided to put the case up to the men themselves. I wonder how many of them will admit the truth of what you say? I wonder how many of them will rise in indignation to deny the allegations? The majority of them, no doubt, will simply read, chuckle and pass on. But it would be tremendously interesting to get the masculine reaction to your point of view.

M. H.

Student Has Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In June I expect to be graduated from one of the business colleges here in Washington. It is not the custom of this school to send out invitations or announcements of the graduation. I wish to send a short note to some of my friends and relatives who do not know that I will be among the graduates and I have been wondering if you could tell me what would be best to say and what kind and size stationery I should use. Sincerely yours,

NAOMI.

DEAR NAOMI: Since it is not the custom of this school to send out announcements of, or invitations to, its graduation exercises, I question whether you would be doing the graceful and correct thing to depart from tradition. As you probably know, it is customary for persons to acknowledge recepit of such announcements or invitations by sending a gift to the young person of their acquaintance who is a member of the graduating class. In other words, therefore, you are making a tacit bid for a congratulatory gift in sending out such notes as you have in mind.

• • • •

However, this may be a case for applying the rule: "When in Rome, do as the Romans do." Find out what your classmates propose doing and you do likewise. If the majority are agreed upon sending out announcements, any kind of heavy white linen stationery would be suitable, either single or double sheets of note paper, or even stiff white cards with matching envelopes.

• • • •

It is difficult for one person to tell another how to word an informal note, since an informal note should be written in conversational style characteristic of the person who is penning the missive. If I were writing this note, I might say: "Dear Aunt Mary: Friday, June 26, at 10:30 a. m., marks the great moment when, after 18 months' diligent application to study, I am to receive my reward of merit in the form of a diploma from Blank's secretarial school. I would be so pleased if you could be present and lend me your moral support on this, to me, most auspicious occasion. Can't you come? Blank's school, as you know, is located at 1900 Umpty-ump street, and exercises start promptly at 10:30 on the thirteenth floor. I'll be looking for you. Affectionately, Jane."

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Cezanne Show in Paris Spurs Enthusiasm.

The Cezanne exhibition in Paris has aroused a new interest in greens and blues. Style authorities predict that the fall mode will be greatly influenced by these color combinations. Yellowy green with light sapphire blues, fading to deep sky-blue is one tricolor costume possibility, which may be copied from the Cezanne landscapes. Contrasting with these vivid tones are washed-out dark blues, dull grays and browns which offer tremendous possibilities for the fashion designers to use as a nucleus for a frock, accenting with brilliant hues and tints.

The vibrant blues and greens may be combined with faded concrete tones or the similar tones used by the artist in painting nudes. Dull red, golden yellow and pale blue is another popular array of colors, fancied by Cezanne in several of his portraits. The blues and reds emulating the colors used by the artist in his painting called the "Blue Vase" may also influence the fall color chart.

Has Navy.

Sir Guy Standing's love of sailing has led to his acquiring a miniature "navy." He now has a punt and a rowboat at Lake Malibu, as well as two small sailing boats that he skippers in races at Los Angeles Harbor.

Daily Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Despite the generous amount of information that is available concerning the deadly character of a diseased appendix, tragedies continue to occur. But a few weeks ago a highly intelligent, successful business man called his family physician after suffering for more than 24 hours with a great deal of abdominal distress. On examination the physician found a ruptured appendix with a spreading peritonitis. The friends are now consoling the family although—all too late—every aid to recovery was utilized that modern science could muster.

Some authorities deny the existence of chronic or recurring appendicitis. However, it seems reasonable to assume that any mucous lined blind pouch, such as the gall bladder or the appendix, may become inflamed, partially heal, and again be the seat of bacterial growth. One attack follows another, none possibly severe enough to indicate clearly that the appendix should be removed. In many long series of operated cases the number showing previous inflammation of the appendix will be considerable—some as high as 63 per cent.

Symptoms Often Reorganise.

The symptoms can often be recognized by a careful study of the history of the patient, who may tell of more or less constant dull pain in the right lower portion of the abdomen, which is made worse by exercise. Sharp pain is not always elicited by pressure. The most characteristic symptom may be back pressure in the digestive tract, which may be the cause of stomach symptoms, notably nausea and vomiting. In fact, French physicians describe what they call dyspepsia of the appendix, characterized by a full feeling which comes on shortly after meals with considerable gas and nausea. These manifestations, however, may not distinguish the malady from disease of the gall bladder. Among the toxic signs are loss of appetite, headache, and a general feeling of fatigue.

Acute inflammation can occur in a chronic appendix—one that has been damaged by previous assaults—and sometimes a patient will disregard the symptoms because they are the same as he experienced for three or four days a year or two ago. Failure to proceed promptly has been followed much too often by disaster, as rupture of a previously diseased structure can and does occur.

Many investigators believe that the appendix may function as a focus of infection, particularly in the development of arthritis, and a case is related in which the joint symptoms were greatly aggravated with each seizure of abdominal pain. A study of the appendix revealed a chronically inflamed organ that contained pus. With its removal the joint symptoms disappeared wholly. Neuritis likewise has been traced to a similar state of affairs.

Diagnosis Often Difficult.

An accurate diagnosis is often difficult. There is, of course, the patient's history of acute pain, sometimes weeks or months apart, and tenderness in the abdomen limited to the lower portion of the ascending colon. An X-ray may be of considerable help, the patient having taken a barium meal. There are so many confusing disease entities, however, that great care must be exercised. It is usually wise to place the patient under good medical management before operation can be advised with certainty. Conditions that may bring on similar symptoms are ulcers in the duodenum or the stomach, inflammation of the pelvic organs in women, gall bladder diseases, enlargement of the kidney with destruction of the kidney substance, and trouble in the ureter, the tube which carries urine from the kidney to the bladder.

Rarely will medical treatment be of much help if the appendix is definitely at fault. If the symptoms are functional or due to some abnormality in the upper portion of the digestive tract they will probably disappear and it will then be clear that the appendix is not guilty. We need to watch for the chronic appendix, but we must not ascribe every type of abdominal discomfort to this structure.

Film Comedian Gives Universe His Philosophy

Lionel Stander Dissects His Art in Poolroom; Hollywood Items.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 31.—"We exhibitionists," said Lionel Stander, screwball film philosopher, "take ourselves too seriously."

Clad in faded purple pajamas, the bushy-haired comedian methodically destroyed his reputation as a cue expert while discussing life and letters over a pool table in his Hollywood home.

"Ham psychology is the actor's trouble. It comes of thinking the movies are some terrific racket which they are not. The eight ball in the corner pocket." (Missed).

"I'm not criticizing the poor clucks. We all do our best, but the fact remains that no matter how well we wiggle our hips and bat our eyes in front of two pieces of machinery, it's all pretty unimportant. The ten ball in the side." (Scratch). "So why not relax and have fun?

"As I said once to Marlene Dietrich, 'why worry? Millions may sleep through this week's picture, but last week's is older than yesterday's newspaper, and that's the oldest thing in the world'—this is going to be famous masse shot. The eleven ball in the lower corner." (The cue ball jumped the rail and narrowly missed a window).

"As I Was Saying."

"As I was saying, movies are just an industry which has to sell its product sight unseen. To sell unseen goods you've got to have a terrific ballyhoo. The ballyhoo gets so good it convinces even the players they're important, and our egos swell up so big they crowd us. Fourteen ball in the left corner. (He shot the wrong ball).

"When your ego begins to push you around, you're a sucker for 'ham psychology,' and when you get that, you can't sleep, eat or enjoy yourself for thinking how important you are. Only thing to do then is come to Prof. Stander and have it deflated. Thousands of satisfied customers have taken the cure. The fourteen ball in the side. (A point every five minutes, as regularly as clockwork).

"About myself I have nothing to say, except that I'm a modest fellow, the chrysanthemum is my favorite flower, I abhor publicity, and prefer just to live quietly with mother and friends."

North Wins Over Desert

Paramount has substituted "Spawn of the North," for "Beau Geste" as its first Technicolor picture. Story is about salmon fisheries of the Northwest, and will be filmed either on the Columbia River or in Alaska. Aside from fish, Carole Lombard is the only player cast so far. "Geste" was sidetracked till next fall because the "Sahara" desert near Yuma, Ariz., is too hot to work in currently.

Michael Curtiz, directing "Charge of the Light Brigade," which is finished except for filming the charge itself, is talking to himself over a "rib" engineered by cameramen.

"Well, so long," they told him after seeing the rushes, "that seems to be the last of this one."

"What do you mean? We've still got to shoot the charge."

"Nope. Ain't going to be a charge. Just talked to the boss, and he says he won't need it. Picture's complete the way it is."

"But, it's the charge of the light brigade. We've got to have a charge."

"Not a bit. They're gonna change the name," said the cameramen, and Curtiz lost his hat in a dash for the front office. He came away very pink, and has been muttering ever since.

Cutting-Room Scraps.

Lyda Roberti and Jack Oakie teamed in comedy again. Roberti was borrowed from Hal Roach to play with the lumpy-jawed Oklahoman in "Champagne Waltz." The gal is also No. 1 prospect as Patsy Kelly's running mate, succeeding the late Thelma Todd.

Loretta Young, shoulder-long black wig in "Ramona," is a ringer for Colleen Moore.

Martha Raye has gone Hollywood. Bought a home in Laurel Canyon.

Robert Taylor says he may China Clipper to Honolulu for his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brown, (Alice Joyce) say they'll tour the world next winter in a station wagon, of all things!

"THE UNFINISHED SYMPHONY." Gaumont British picturization of a story by Walter Reisch, with dialogue by Benn Levy and musical adaptation by Willy Schmidt-Gentner, featuring Marta Eggerth and Hans Jaray, with Helen Chandler, Ronald Squire, Hermine Sterler, Cecil Humphreys, Paul Wagner, Beryl Laverick and Esme Percy. Directed by Willy Forst. A revival.

In reviving this British "translation" of a successful German musicdrama, the Little Theater makes available again to Washington picturegoers one of the most effective of the romances based upon the love story in the life of Franz Schubert, the composer. Even without its superb musical embellishment, "The Unifinished Symphony" would be a drama of compelling interest. Interlarded with the most familiar of the Schubert compositions, it becomes at once a completely rounded and fascinating study of a great career.

Adding to the impressiveness of the picture is the fact that in the more majestic of its musical passages the Schubert melodies are played and sung by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra and the principals and chorus of the Vienna State Opera.

Scoring emphatically, both by the excellence of their acting and the beauty of their singing, in the more individualized intervals of the story, Marta Eggerth and Hans Jaray reveal themselves as consumate artists in the roles of Caroline and Schubert, respectively. Prominent in the supporting company and largely responsible for the romantic appeal of the operetta is Helen Chandler, one of the American theater's most ingenuous actresses—as was most recently demonstrated on a local stage by her excellent work in Max Gordon's production of "Pride and Prejudice."

The new bill, inaugurated yesterday at the Little, is completed by shortreel subjects and news events.

About The Showshops

BOOKS for the 1936-37 subscription season of the American Theater Society of Washington automatically—and theoretically, too, by the way—close today. Theoretically, because old subscribers will be allowed the customary "three days grace" to renew reservations of their favorite seat locations. After Thursday of this week, June 4, all unclaimed reservations will be allocated to the long waiting lists of new subscribers. The 1936-37 subscription season will, as usual, include three New York Theater Guild productions and three from other sources.

BELL.

When, as and if Sam H. Grisman, coproducer of "Tobacco Road," puts on the new Otto Harbach-Sigmund Romberg operetta, "Lady in the Window," next season, with Carl Brisson in the male lead, it is highly probable that Mady Christian, another screen luminary, will be the prima donna.

The Washington Players inaugurate their summer season tomorrow and Wednesday nights in Roosevelt Auditorium with "Stop Thief." John M. Kline, jr., directed the famous old Broadway comedy hit, with Kate Tomlinson, Yerby Pannill and Bob Halsted in the roles created by Ruth Chester, Mary Ryan and Frank Bacon, respectively.

"One, two, three, four, and . . . Right, left; right, left . . . Keep that line straight! . . . four, and . . . Form that semicircle . . . Deep stage . . . Right, left . . . No, no, no! That's terrible . . . All over again from the beginning . . . four, and . . . Up to the curtain line . . . Alternate boys and girls, left and right . . . Watch that tempo and let's have a little life . . . Give it to me . . . Right, left; right . . . Deep stage, back, back, back . . . Come on, you dancers . . . Retard for that hitch-kick . . . Keep swaying, you chorus . . . Right, left; right, left . . . This is your RIGHT foot, Miss Whosis . . . Down center, dancers . . . Off, right and left . . . Hold that line . . . Now, SWING IT! . . . All over aagin, from the beginning!"

Which is to say that Billy Holbrook, famous stage director, is whipping a few score of the membership of the Young Democrats of Washington into the intricacies of finished dance routines for "Kapital Kapers," at the National Friday and Saturday nights. Rehearsals have been going on for days now, in the Joe Brown studios on G street, and when the 24 program units reveal themselves on the stage, you will see a real revue. No kidding. I watched a rehearsal. And when Billy Holbrook rehearses them, I mean they're rehearsed!

Setting at rest rumors of a Ninth street scramble for the place as another motion-picture house, Col. James Jeremiah Lake, Beau Brummel of burleycue and Chesterfield of the sports arenas, last week signed a five-year lease for the Gayety Theater. He will, of course, continue the policy that has made it the ace burlesque house of the country.

One reason Jessie Matthews, starring in "It's Love Again," at the Earle, has not been signed to a Hollywood contract is that she insists that her husband, Sonnie Hale, comedy lead in her present vehicle, also be included in the agreement. There are no Jessie Matthewses, but plenty of Sonnie Haleses on the West Coast.

Add things to look forward to: Phil Hayden drops a line to say that his annual revue will be given in the National Theater on Sunday night, June 14. Phil always puts on a swell show.

From 307 Tenth street southwest, under date of May 26, 1936, Henry Hull, star of "Tobacco Road," which closed its season at the National last night, received the following—"Dear Mr. Hull: From the printed program of 'Tobacco Road' I apprehended the facts that George Graves probably is responsible for the stage settings, that Walter McCall took good care of the lighting effects and Norman Rockwell is the publicity agent, but what I really should like to know is, who the hell designed the costumes! Curiously yours, (Signed) A. WOLNEY."

As far as this column can determine, they were designed by that nationally known firm of Penury, Poverty & Privation, by appointment to His Majesty, the Tenant Share-Cropper.

Johnnie Sikken, one of the better of the local Booths, is coming back to the summer theater wars to play in the Washington Players' "Comedy of Errors" and the third successive season's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

From Ned Alvord comes an invitation to visit the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial as guest of the management. From a cursory glance at the gayly emblazoned prospectus, we'd like to—"Wild and Whoo-pee!" says the young September Morn, perched precariously on a bucking broncho. Then there are those bathing girls at the Casa Manana. Either they are 12 feet tall, or the audience of 4,500 is composed entirely of Singer Midgets! Their bathing suits, not so very incidentally, are composed entirely of Texas climate.

Thanks-for-Small-Favors Note.

Now that the play has closed, it may be permissible to observe that with a little more intelligence, wit and savoir faire, the character of Dude Lester, in "Tobacco Road," would have been a first-class oaf.

But, I suppose, half an oaf is better than none!

Culbertson on Bridge

Minimum Suit Take-out.

When your partner bids one no trump and you hold a biddable five card suit, but only one-half to one honor trick in your hand, bid the suit.

But you must be careful not to bid only two of a suit if you are strong enough to raise the no trump or jump to game in your suit.

When you have a six card or longer suit, or two five card suits, you should take out your partner's no trump bid even if you have no honor trick at all. Now, if your partner bids two no trump, you can show that you have a weak hand by rebidding your suit, and your partner will pass because this bid is a sign-off.

If you have less than one-half honor trick, and no six card suit or two suiter, you usually should pass.

A Vital Asking Bid.

It has long been realized that aces are not the only honors to be located in safe slam bidding. Kings, too, even queens, often are the strategic cards that make or break a slam contract.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ A Q 9 5 3
♥ 8 6 3
♦ K 5
♣ 7 6 4

WEST
♠ J 8 3
♥ 10 7 5 4
♦ A 9 7 6
♣ 10 2

EAST
♥ K Q J 9 2
♦ 10 8 4

SOUTH
♠ K 10 7 4
♥ A
♣ A K Q 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	1 spade	Pass
4 dimds	Pass	5 spades	Pass
6 spades (final bid)

The moment that North responded with one spade to South's opening club bid, South became "slam minded." But at the same time he realized the need for sound investigation into the weakness of his own hand: the diamond suit, with the ace and king missing. Moreover, even if North held one of these vital cards, it also was necessary to determine whether he held the spade ace. There was a distinct possibility that North's response had been based on a holding such as spade Q J 9 8 3 heart K Q 8 diamond K 5 4 club 3 2, certainly an excellent spade response, but not slam material in conjunction with South's hand.

Hence, South adopted the simple expedient of finding out by means of his four diamond asking bid. It should be noted that, had North actually held a hand such as the one just given as a possibility, he would have had to sign off with four spades, which South would not have disturbed.

As it was, however, holding second round diamond control and the ace of spades, North was able to make the conventional response of a jump in his own suit to show these precise values. South's six bid then followed as a matter of course.

Obviously, the hand was a laydown for six-odd, one of North's losing hearts being discarded on the good diamond in South's hand, and the other heart being ruffed.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, May 31.

I took Shirley Temple to the movies. And the picture I took her to see was the preview of Shirley Temple in "Poor Little Rich Girl." I began to like Shirley more and more as I watched her make pictures, and soon I couldn't resist the temptation to date her up. There was a moon, a beautiful prop, on the set and I asked Shirley if she would make a date with me. She answered quickly, "You'll have to ask my mother."

SHIRLEY TEMPLE.

"I asked Mrs. Temple. I told her that I wanted to see how Shirley acted when she watched herself on the screen. Oh, the excuses we columnists can legitimately make. I wanted to see what happen when a fellow goes out with "America's Sweetheart." And, after all, here was a girl just my size. We made a date for Wednesday nite, beau's nite, at Grauman's Chinese Theater.

• • • •

When I arrived at the theater, Shirley was already there, seated. She didn't say, "You're late. You kept me waiting." She merely said, "Good evening, Sidney," and shook hands with me. Mr. and Mrs. George Temple were seated next to Shirley. And in the next row, sitting directly behind Shirley, was her bodyguard, John Griffith. Now you lads who really have hopes of romancing Shirley will know who'll be there when you take Shirley out alone. I began to feel that I was doing experimental work. If my observations and notes can be of service for the future Romeos, here they are . . .

• • • •

A trailer for the flicker, "Little Miss Nobody," with Jane Withers, Shirley's supposed rival, was on. I looked at Shirley watch another kid star. Her face displayed no emotion; she made no comment. She sat in her seat, merely another member of the audience. Next came the Newsreel. Shirley sat up straighter in her seat. When Lehr, the comic, did his routine, Shirley laughed. After a bit of broad hokum she said, "Oh, boy. Oh, boy." She enjoyed the newsreel. Then the house lights went on.

Every one turned around to look for Shirley, and every one found Shirley. At least, it seemed like every one. I began to feel conspicuous. Men and women and children walked down the aisle to Shirley. A man would stop and say, "I just want to touch her," and then he would slap Shirley on the arm and walk away contented. Then a woman or a kid would say the same thing and slap Shirley. Occasionally, a person would ask for an autograph. Shirley took all this with a smile and was pleasant to every stranger. I began to understand what "America's doll friend" has to do for her public.

• • • •

I said to George Temple, "Doesn't this annoy you? He replied, "It used to. Now we're used to it. Say, this is mild. Sometimes they try to tear bits of her clothing for souvenirs." Then the house lights dimmed. The picture started: Shirley Temple in "Poor Little Rich Girl." There was thunderous applause when this credit slide appeared. Shirley took no bow, even to herself. When she made her first appearance on the screen, there was more applause. Still no reaction from Shirley. She sat there watching herself apparently without emotion. A kid nearby laughed loudly at a Shirley Temple antic. Shirley turned about to look at her.

• • • •

Shirley made no comment during the picture. She would look toward her father when there was a line in the flicker about her movie father, but that was all. She sat erect and on the edge of the seat when she was singing or dancing, and she would slink back into her chair when her dramatic scenes were on. She would tap her foot when she was dancing on the screen. Her dancing seemed to interest her the most. Occasionally she became fidgety, and then she would play with her hands. I want to tell the Romeos who are going to take Shirley out that they wouldn't be able to hold hands with her, even in a dark theater. Too many people are watching, including a bodyguard.

• • • •

After the picture was over, Shirley sat there until most of the audience left. I asked her what she thought of the picture and she said, "I liked it." George Temple thought it was one of Shirley's best. Mrs. Temple said, "I'm so tired."

Then I said to Shirley, "How about going to the Trocadero?' She answered, "I really got to go to bed." George Temple said, "Shirley's never been to the Trocadero." "Oh, yes, I have," replied Shirley. "About twice a week I pretend to go to the Trocadero."

Shirley and I then said "Good night" to each other. We made another date to meet on the set, but don't let any of the other columnists know.

School Exhibits Go on View Today

Elementary classes in public schools throughout Washington will send exhibits of science work done this year to a display opening this morning in Henry D. Cooke School, Seventeenth and Euclid streets northwest.

The exhibit, planned by elementary science department of divisions 1 to 9, will continue through Friday. It will be open to the public.

According to Miss Esther Scott, head of the department, the exhibit is planned to give teachers and parents an opportunity to see some of the science activities carried on by pupils, and "to serve as a clearing house for ideas which teachers could utilize in their science programs."

Collections of many kinds will be shown, including models of home-made electrical devices and reports of classroom activities.

The Federal Diary

By Elizabeth K. Read.

The chief and five other members of the Division of Federal Reserve Issue and Redemption, ranging in age from 66 to 79 years, will retire July 1.

Four of them have already gone from the offices in the basement of the Treasury Building, taking their unused days of leave to advance their retirement date. But the chief, Lincoln Grant Copeland, a friend of President Harding and a fellow Ohio country newspaper editor-owner, and Mrs. Mary L. Soule (pronounced Soul-lay, by the way) will hold on until the last day. Even then, they don't really want to leave, and their retirement has been postponed three times during the last two years.

Through the hands of 79-year-old Mrs. Soule—the boys in the office love to call her "Mary" to see her eyes twinkle and hear her laughing reproof—have passed millions of dollars in wornout bills since she came to the office in 1919. She is a money counter, as are the four other women who officially retire at the end of the month.

She is more sprightly and more efficient than the majority of employes, her chief said, and her sense of humor has made her one of the most popular members of the division. With vision unimpaired, her hearing acute and other facilities as youthful as those of women many years her junior, Mrs. Soule handles about a quarter of a million dollars every day—and her accuracy is the talk of the office.

Counts Old and New.

The division counts all wornout bills before destroying them and tabulates all new currency before it gets into circulation.

The other women to retire are Mrs. C. B. Quesenberry, 70, who has been in the division since 1919; Mrs. Henrietta T. Brinker, 66, who came there in 1929; Mrs. Addie K. Burchard, 73, who joined the division in 1919, and Miss Susan U. Snead, 67, whose service dates back to 1918.

"I'm just going to have myself a good time," said the white-haired Mrs. Soule, a native Washingtonian. "There have always been a lot of things I wanted to do right here in Washington and now I shall do them."

She is the oldest of a large family of sisters and has numerous nieces and other relatives living in the city. Her father, the late Salvatore Ptrola, was the assistant leader of the United States Marine Band for 30 years and she has known many famous musicians and people in public life.

"Without knowing it, Mrs. Soule probably handled some of the famous Lindbergh ransom money, if it has come back to us," Copeland said. To this she replied, "I wish I could have spotted it."

Resembled Lincoln.

Copeland, 67, who says his name causes his friends much amusement, was so called because his father knew both Lincoln and Grant intimately. He himself was so like Lincoln in appearance that he was once mistaken for him and hustled onto a platform in Springfield, Ohio, from the shoulders of admirers of the Civil War President and told that the assembled crowd was ready to hear the speech he had promised.

Copeland lives at 6112 Third street northwest. He came to Washington at the request of President Harding, whom he had known for 30 years. At that time, he owned not only the LaRue News, a county paper near Marion, where Harding edited the Marion Star, but was president of a bank, a director in another, and a farmer in a small way.

"Harding offered me this job and here I have been ever since," he said. "When I leave here I shall go on with the writing I dropped to enter the Government service. I want to write a historical novel or one on government and politics. I will not return to Ohio."

About two and a half billion dollars is redeemed each year in Copeland's department.

There's a grand fisherman in the Treasury Department, Philip Castle, foreman of the laborers. About three or four times a week he comes into the offices of his favorites around the building with a nice lump offering he has caught the previous night from his little sailboat on Chesapeake Bay. He drives down to his summer cottage three miles south of Chesapeake Beach and puts out for a night's catch. Twenty or 30 large croakers are not unusual—much to the envy of the professional fishermen of the neighborhood. But he has an order to bring in a "hen-shad" for Thomas Marks, assistant chief clerk of the Treasury Department, and Castle complains the shad season is over.

A concerted drive at the Republican and Democratic conventions for approval of National Federation of Federal Employes proposals for strengthening the Civil Service has begun, said the secretary, Miss Gertrude M. McNally. To further this cause and the other interests of the federation, the president, Luther C. Steward, will attend the conventions. He has a place in the press section as editor of the organization's magazine.

"This is a critical time, for we would like both conventions to include this in their platforms," she said. "It is possible Congress may take some action along that line before the conventions but we are laying our plans and talking to important people every day."

The golf players at the Veterans' Administration feel neglected because it was not reported that the winner of their annual golf tourney at the Indian Spring Country Club last week was Otto Elboe, an associate member of the Board of Veterans Appeal, the high court of appeal for veterans with difficulties to settle.

End of 'Grade System' Predicted for Schools

Greeley, Colo., May 31 (AP).—The present-day common school, where pupils either pass to a higher grade each year or fail and repeat a course, will soon disappear from American education, Dr. George W. Frasier, president of Colorado State College of Education, predicted today.

"Doing away with promotions, failures, grades and report cards is not a passing fad," Frasier said in a baccalaureate address before the college's 1936 graduating class.

"The best schools of today have no failures and no promotions. Children are guided through one year after another of valuable experiences • • • Interest must be in the materials of education and not in external rewards or punishments."

Miss Hudson Sails the Pacific

Having performed handsomely in such Twentieth Century-Fox productions as "Curly Top," with Shirley Temple and John Boles; "Show Them No Mercy," with Cesar Romero, and "Way Down East," with Henry Fonda, Rochelle Hudson, one of the most capable of the cinema's younger actresses, thought it was about time for a vacation, so she took steamer for the Hawaiian Islands. Here she is shown bedecked in leis upon her arrival in Honolulu. One wonders just what was the idea of what seems to be a left-handed salute. Even that, from Miss Hudson, would be quite a compliment!

Nats Win, 6-4, As Appleton Checks A's

Kuhel Wallops Homer to Overcome Athletics' Early Lead.

Russell Is Taken Out; Three Mack Hurlers Are Chased.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 31.—In the camp of their old American League pals, the Athletics, the battered Nats today found balm for their Decoration Day wounds suffered in New York. Against hospitable Philadelphia pitching they recovered to the extent of a 6-4 victory.

Thus the dog is still biting the man as far as the Washington-Philadelphia series is concerned. Today's triumph of the Nats was their seventh in eight games against the A's this season.

The A's made out as if to win the game in the early innings when they took a 4-2 lead against Jack Russell, but along came Joe Kuhel with a well-walloped home run over the right field wall to tie the score and the Nats won in a gallop from that point.

Appleton Wins Game

The Nats' triumph, as a matter of fact, dated from the time when Manager Bucky Harris got Jack Russell out of there at the end of the third inning and motioned Pete Appleton into the game. It was a happy choice. Old Pete shut the A's out in the last six innings, allowed 'em only five hits and struck out six of 'em to receive credit for the victory.

If it's any consolation for 'em, the A's outhit the Nats, 10 to 8, but the 7,000 customers who were prematurely gay in those early innings had little to cheer for after Appleton appeared on the scene.

Bill Deitrich couldn't hold that 4-2 lead the A's gave him in the first three innings and he left the box under great pressure in the seventh after wild-pitching one run across the plate. The A's then used a couple of other pitchers, named Wilshere and Flythe before they could get the Nats out in that seventh.

Myer Scores Lewis.

The Nats performed something of a feat in the first inning when they made two hits—by Lewis and Stone—drew a base on balls and benefited from an error and a wild pitch, yet failed to score. The rally sagged when Lewis was run down between third and home on Myer's grounder to Newsome.

Then the A's took a 1-0 lead. Moses singled through the box and Puccinelli walloped a triple to center to score him. They made it 3-0 in the second inning after Russell walked Johnson. Hayes contributed a single and so did Finney.

Buddy Myer cut that lead to 3-2 in the third when he followed Lewis' single to left with a long triple to left center on the hit and run play and scored from third when Stone grounded to Finney, but the A's bounced right back with another run when Buddy Lewis tossed in a pair of errors after Moses beat out a single to third base.

It was still 4 to 2 when Newsome muffed Travis' grounder at the start of the sixth, but after the next pitch it was 4 to 4, because Joe Kuhel banged his sixth home run of the year high over the rightfield wall

Giants Bow Third Straight Time as 12,000 Fans Wildly Approve.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 31.—The Dodgers made it three straight over the Giants today, winning 4 to 3, as Carl Hubbell, the New York ace lefthander, again failed against his Brooklyn jinx.

The winning run came across in the ninth. Al Smith, the fourth Giant pitcher of the day, walked Buddy Hassett with the bases loaded, forcing Frenchy Bordagaray home with the tally.

A crowd of about 12,000 scattered paper on the field during a wild ninth, when the Giants tied the score by scoring two runs on a hit and three Brooklyn errors.

Hubbell was knocked out of the box in the eighth when the Dodgers scored three runs, Joe Stripp's double driving in two, and Hassett's single and Mancuso's error accounting for the other.

West Coast Pair Look to Olympics

By the Associated Press.

Berkeley, Calif., May 31.—With near world-record equalling performances as references, two West Coast collegians were ranked today as outstanding candidates for this year's American Olympic team.

Phil Levy, Stanford discus thrower, and Archie Williams, University of California Negro quarter-mile runner, added their names to the list of outstanding candidates during the Pacific Coast conference championship meet here yesterday.

Levy, who has consistently hurled the platter just over the 160-foot mark, climaxed his collegiate competition on the Pacific Coast with a mark of 170 feet 10⅝ inches. The accepted world record is 171 feet 11⅜ inches by Harald Anderson, of Sweden.

Williams won the quarter-mile in 46.8 seconds, four-tenths of a second slower than the world record set in 1932 by Ben Eastman, then a Stanford student.

Indians Sweep Series With Chicago

Kennedy Yields 13 Hits as Cleveland Annexes Contest, 7 to 5.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 31.—The Indians solved their old nemesis, Vernon Kennedy, for base hits in every inning today to win, 7 to 5, and sweep a three-game series with the Chicago White Sox.

The Chicago righthander, who pitched a no-hit game last year against the Tribe, gave up 13 hits, five bases on balls, and let in a run with a wild pitch. Sterling fielding support saved Mel Harder, his mound rival, as each of the Cleveland outfielders made a sensational catch.

Browns Take Series From Tigers

Hornsby's Pinch Hit in 9th Wins, 11 to 10, in Slugging Bee.

Five-Run Rally in Last Inning Overcomes Detroit Lead.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 31.—Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis Browns manager, made his first appearance of the season today as a pinch hitter in the ninth inning and came through with a sharp single to rightfield, scoring Rollie Hemsley from second base with the winning run in and 11-to-10-slugfest victory over Detroit.

The score climaxed a five-run rally by the Browns and gave them a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Detroit had entered the ninth inning with a 10 to 6 lead largely as the result of a five-run outburst in the seventh inning.

Clift hit a home run in the ninth scoring Lary ahead of him, and Coleman got a four-base blow in the second, with Bell on base.

Yanks Down Red Sox, 5-4, In 12th

Di Maggio's Tripple Is Decisive, New York's Lead 4½ Games.

41,781 See Tilt; Gehrig, Glenn Hit Home Run Blows.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—Young Joe DiMaggio, the Yankees' sensational rookie, stole the hero's spotlight again today, tripling in the twelfth to send in the winning run as the New Yorkers defeated the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 4.

The victory, marking the first extra-inning game at the Yankee Stadium this season, increased the New York lead to 4½ full games over the Sox. A crowd of 41,781 was in the stands.

Lou Gehrig's eighth home run of the season and a four-bagger by Joe Glenn, filling in for the injured Bill Dickey behind the plate, kept the Yanks in the running in the early innings, as the Sox moved out to a 3-2 lead in the first four frames.

Lefty Grove, Boston's portside ace and previously twice victor over the Yanks this season, started his first game since he split his thumb more than a week ago, but was relieved for a pinch-hitter after going seven innings.

The Sox, meantime, belted Johnny Broaca, the Yanks' starting pitcher, until he was relieved in the third. Four hits, including Grove's double, accounted for the early Boston runs in the first and third. Bump Hadley, who replaced Broaca, held the Sox to one run and four hits the rest of the way.

Fritz Ostermueller, who relieved Grove, held the Yanks hitless until they put together Crosetti's single, Rolfe's force and DiMaggio's triple in the twelfth. DiMaggio extended his hitting streak to 14 straight games.

Helen Dettweiler Favored to Win Medal in Women's Golf Today

Star Shoots 79 to Tie Record

Congressional Course Mark Is Equaled in Exhibition Play.

Helen Dettweiler, Congressional Country Club's tall, blonde star, goes to the post as the favorite to win the medal and possibly the tournament in the District Women's Golf Championship which opens this morning over her home course.

Miss Dettweiler added luster to last week's shining, record-smashing 74 at Beaver Dam by stroking a 79 yesterday in an exhibition match at Congressional.

She teamed with Roland Mackenzie, her professional, to defeat Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, and 17-year-old Marian Brown, of Manor, 2 and 1.

Miss Dettweiler's 79, five over mens' par, tied the unofficial course mark set by Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, in the Middle Atlantic Championship last fall. It was two shots lower than Miss Dettweiler's best previous score.

Mackenzie rolled out a 69, Spencer a 72, and pretty Miss Brown, who also is a contender for the District title, an 88.

This week's District championship promises to be the most thrilling in history, what with a record field of 104 competing, and the caliber of participants far above that of any other season.

Winifred Faunce, of Manor, winner for the last two seasons, a sturdy match play golfer; Mrs. Meckley; Mrs. Elsie Haynes, of Congressional, former champion; Mrs. Jack Scott, of Kenwood; Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood; Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, and Miss Louise Claytor, of Chevy Chase, all seasoned performers, are figured to go far in the championship. Miss Faunce is an automatic qualifier, and thus will not compete in the medal round today.

Elites, Cubans Divide Pair Of Games

Candy Jim Taylor's Washington Elite Giants and the New York Cubans divided a twin bill yesterday at Griffith Stadium before a crowd of 3,000 fans, the Elites taking the opener, 4-3, and dropping the nightcap, 8-7.

Outhit in the first game, the Elites bunched their hits in the second, fourth and sixth frames to win handily. Bill Byrd, Elite hurler, kept the Islanders at bay until the ninth, when Salazer and Santella whacked out safeties, with two down. Byrd was yanked in favor of "Schoolboy" Griffith, who forced Thomas and Spearman to fly out, ending the game.

Lefty Stanley, on the mound for the Cubans in the second, turned in a masterful performance until the fifth inning, when he was nicked for four successive blows. Allbright relieved the southpaw and prevented further damage.

The Cubans, led by Showboat Thomas, bunched safeties off Griffith to take a 3-0 lead in the fourth. Lefty Holmes relieved Griffith and allowed but three hits in the remaining innings.

The Cuban Ambassador and Ferdinand Q. Williams, commissioner of Negro baseball, were among the spectators.

Prince George's County high school activities will end Tuesday when the baseball nines of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier meet for the second time this season on the Mounts' home field. The first game, which went to 14 innings, was won by Hyattsville by the score of 3-2.

fore it at Wimbledon, England, last summer, so the Australians aimed everything they could at Mako. The invaders had the psychological advantage, however, of having beaten Budge and Mako in the 1395 Wimbledon semifinals.

Mako Is Handicap.

Budge, in the first two sets particularly, appeared as though he could turn the trick alone. Except for sporadic assistance on overhead smashes, Mako's lack of experience hampered the American side. His service, little more than a push shot, was smothered by the Australians and consequently it was broken five times. Budge's delivery, easily the most potent of the four, was shattered twice, in the eleventh of the fourth set and in the disastrous seventh game of the final chapter.

The way Budge was going and with Crawford looking none too refreshed from his singles match 24 hours ago, it seemed the Americans would win in straight sets.

The Americans broke Crawford and Quist's service three times each in the first two sets. After that Crawford's delivery became too hot to handle and Quist yielded only one more game on service, Quist's habit of fading into his service resulted in six foot faults being called against him.

Except for when he joined Mako in blowing up in the last four games, Budge remained steady, but it was more than a one-man job to stop the Australians.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, and Vivian McGrath, of Australia, left out of the actual competition, put on an exhibition after the doubles match. Grant won in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4, and there were some who immediately raised eyebrows at the American team leader, Walter Pate, for using Allison instead of "Bitsy."

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Charles Town, May 31.

Having heard this story only yesterday, I had intended to save it until some day when I failed to have a winner. However, it is too good to leave lying around. The boys were batting the stuff yesterday while waiting for the crowd to arrive and the subject turned to horses "beating the gate." One of the veteran horsemen came up with this yarn. He said that he used to ride and that one day it was so foggy that the starter could hardly see the horses. With several others in the field, his mount broke through. The horse became unruly and dashed some 50 yards down the track. He was trying his best to turn the horse around when he heard the starting bell ring. So he just clucked to his horse and sailed along. To make the story better, he said he just lasted to win by a nose. Speaking of starts, Palmer's work here yesterday was a big improvement over anything I saw at Hagerstown. We did fairly well with the opening card and Genie Palatine took the measure of Wise Sister as we predicted. BILL.

First race—Tuleyries Star, winner over Scout On here last December, is making her first start of the year. Conditioned on the grounds, I see no reason for mistakes. Fashion Queen will like this course better than Hagerstown and is dangerous. Forest Faun for the show.

Second race—Silvery Cloud scratched yesterday, would do a lot of running if sent postward in this company. Her last at the other track was good. Mint Bud would be dangerous under Palumbo's handling. Crossing Over would be close if in action.

Third race—Sea Finn, in the money three times at Hagerstown, may be the right one. Flageolet has early speed and could be a keen factor here. Bromide for the show. At Dusk may go in improved form under the light weight and on the new track.

Fourth race—Timber Lady has had mishaps in each start to date. She needs only to run her real race to get home ahead of these. Justa Jimmie and Miss Wrack to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Prince Turley has plenty of speed and should favor this track. If he can overcome the outside post position he should score. Scudder should do better here than at Hagerstown. Nay Nay likes the course and is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Red Label seems ideally placed in this field. Shares top weight with Titian Kiddie, the one to beat. Maxyniata is at home on this track and will be ready if the top pair make mistakes.

Seventh race—Mace and Hot Cake will battle it out for the chief award in this field. The latter can improve yesterday's showing. Pauline H. loves the route and could take it all.

Best bet—Red Label.

Motorcycle policemen were required to patrol the outer boundaries of the South Ellipse outfield yesterday to keep a record-breaking crowd of 7,000 baseball fans under control while the Shady Grove Barbecuers won a 10-inning game from the Heurich Brewers in the National City League of the Washington Post Sandlot Association.

The fans were well rewarded. They saw the Barbecuers, newly reinforced with the college stars, hand the Brewers their first league defeat of the season, 4-3, in a sensational finish. A terrific home run by Waverly Wheeler, University of Maryland athlete, off Lefty Scriverner's first pitch in the last half of the tenth broke up the ball game.

Meanwhile, the Union Printers kept their lead in section A intact by handing Plaza Wine & Liquor a 9-4 defeat in a game featured by four home runs. The Blue Flame Valets, city Sunday champions, were clinging to second place by swamping Miller Furniture, 14 to 1.

Ross Jewelers Win.

In Section B, the Ross Jewelers pulled another ninth inning rally to beat Regal Clothing, 8 to 7, and take undisputed possession of first place.

The game between the Heurich's and Shady Grove saw the Brewers get off to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Fee Colliere singled to left and Biff Shelton lifted a long fly to right, both men making the circuit when Bryant missed the catch. The Brewers added another in the second when Knight singled to right and Scrivener doubled.

Adgett Adair ran into difficulties in the first half of the tenth when the Brewers leveled a bunting attack.

The Blue Flames swamped Miller Furniture, 14 to 1, to keep half a game behind the Printers in the league standings. A home run by Joe Pusateri, with two on in the eighth, accounted for three runs.

The W. O. W. Elms' victory over the Dixie Pigs, 10 to 0, came after the Woodmen had lost three games by one run. Charlie Booker allowed the Pigs four hits. Monk Barbour collected three hits and drove in five runs for the Woodmen, once getting a double with the bases loaded.

In Section B, the Jewelers remained unbeaten by means of a ninth-inning rally with two out. Cogan singled to left and stole second. Henderson singled to right, scoring Cogan, and Millar was safe when his pop-fly was dropped by Jett, Henderson going to third and scoring the winning run when Nairn let a throw home get away from him.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Philadelphia, May 31.

Maybe the late Jawn McGraw was slightly in error all of those years when he held steadfastly to the belief that a good Jewish ball player was indispensible to the financial success of a New York team. McGraw spent the sunset years of his life attempting to corral at least one acceptable performer of Hebraic extraction whom he could present for the approval of New York's 2,000,000 Jews.

POVICH.

The best he could come up with was Andy Cohen, a second baseman who rocketed into fame for a month and then sputtered and fizzled back into the minor leagues. New York's Jews who had rallied around the Giants' banner finally turned broad backs upon a second baseman who couldn't hit, and McGraw's search began anew. He found plenty of Jewish ball players, but none who could play ball according to big league specifications.

This lack of Jewish ball players was ascribed to various reasons. The fact that Izzy, Ikey and Jakey were in the store helping Papa to keep down the overhead while other lads of the same age are perfecting themselves as ball players on the sandlots is given as one explanation. The lure of more profitable professions is another.

The Yankees, too, joined the quest for a good Jewish ball player. They realized the potential fans among the city's Jews and their scouts were instructed to keep a weather eye peeled for any ball player whose name smacked of Judaism.

Finally Hank Greenberg, a Bronx boy living only a half-dozen blocks from Yankee Stadium, was recommended as an excellent catch. But Greenberg, offered a contract by the Tigers almost simultaneously, saw no chance to break into the Yankees' line-up with Lou Gehrig at first base, and signed up with Detroit.

But now the Yanks are wondering if a Jewish ball player is, indeed, indispensible to a New York club. Seemingly, they have blundered into the realization that an Italian lad would do as well. Anyway, with three Italians—Lazzeri, Crosetti and DiMaggio—in their line-up, the Yankees are doing very well for themselves at the gate.

New York's Little Italy is mildly nuts over the Italians in the New York line-up. In the past two days the Yankees have played to crowds of 74,000 and 40,000, and gutteral Italain yells were easily audible throughout the stands. The red, white and green Italian flags were proudly displayed by fans in all sections of the enclosure on Decoration Day as the Yanks romped to a pair of victories over Washington.

There's evidence there to convince somebody that a New York club can do very well without a Jewish player in the line-up, but a belief steadily maintained over 20 years is not so easily dispelled, apparently. Anyway, the Yankees have managed to come up with one more Jewish lad who is due to get a thorough trial.

He is George Levy, a Rollins College boy from Florida, whom Yankee scouts have tabbed as the successor to Lou Gehrig whenever that work horse is ready to step out of a regular role.

Washington has a peculiar interest in this boy Levy. He is the tall, stringbean kid of 6 feet 5 inches who was summoned to the Washington training camp at Orlando last spring for a tryout. He came over from Rollins College, only 5 miles away, cavorted at first base, waded into all kinds of pitching, and earned the complete approval of Clark Griffith.

Griffith offered him a Washington contract with a bonus for signing, but Levy asked a day to think it over. He never did accept that contract and the next thing Griffith heard of him he had signed up with the Yankees, who, unbeknown to Griffith, had shunted a scout to Orlando on the day the lad worked out.

If, perchance, young Levy should graduate into a big league star, it will be in line with tradition. The Washington club has made a habit of overlooking great first basemen to whom they gave tryouts.

More than a decade ago the Washington team got wind of a swell young first baseman who was playing bang-up ball for Columbia University. Clark Griffith dispatched a scout to New York, got an adverse report about the lad and forgot about him. That is he forgot about him until he turned up with the Yankees under the name of Lou Gehrig.

Walter Johnson was managing the Washington club in 1929 when a strapping young fellow reported to the team in Boston one afternoon and asked for a tryout. They let him put on a suit, watched him work out, and were not unduly impressed. He got no offer. When his broken wrist heals, he'll go back to first base for the Tigers, because he's Hank Greenberg, the best first baseman to happen along since Gehrig.

Eastern, Tech Faculty Nines Will Play Today

The annual baseball drama involving various members of the Eastern and Tech High faculties will be presented tomorrow afternoon at Eastern Stadium, members of both teams announced last night. There was serious possibility that the Central-Western game for the inter-high championship, also scheduled for tomorrow, may be postponed to Wednesday so that the games will not conflict.

Coach Charlie Guyon of Eastern, who is the perennial pitcher for the Eastern pedagogues, has a tentative line-up all ironed out. The Chief or James Suber will do the pitching with Football Coach Artie Boyd catching, because he is said to have an intimate knowledge of the Tech batters, having formerly played with the Tech faculty.

Jack Knight will play first, Ike Simons, second, Mike Kelly, short, and John Paul (Rip) Collins, third. The outfield will be chosen from Knox, Winsemore, Hippo Fuchs, Hank Flury and Tom Holmes, assistant principal.

Tech's line-up is being chosen from a squad including Hap Hardell, Leonard Brown, Chesley Clark, George Waltz, Al Piggott, Rusty Thompson, G. Foxley, Elmer Zearfost, Charlie Rippy, Art Wondrack and Harry Benner.

The game will start at 3 p. m. and will be followed by a banquet in the school dining room.

Senate Pages Win Over House Team

The legislative bodies may be equal in other respects, but the Senate pages proved themselves superior to the House pages in their annual ball game yesterday on the Reservoir diamond. Jack Friant gave the former a 13-to-12 triumpn in the last half of the ninth when his double scored Schram with the winning run.

Senate led throughout the game only to be tied up in the ninth, when two runs were scored. Individual batting honors went to Catcher Collins, of the winners, with two homers—one in the second and one in the fourth. Dusenbury pitched for the Senate pages.

Gibson Island Race Won by Amethyst

Baltimore, May 31 (AP).—John R. Sherwood's 8-meter sloop Amethyst overcame a ten-minute handicap becalming air gave it at the start to lead a fleet of nine racing yachts across the finish line today in the second of the series of three races for the Rangoon Trophy.

The yachts sailed over a 2½-mile windward and leeward course, three times around, off Gibson Island, in competition for the cup offered by Mrs. George Blakiston.

Dobie II, C. Ben Mitchell, jr.'s yacht, which won Saturday, was third across today and took the lead on point score for the trophy with 1,600 points.

Each yacht is credited with 100 points for finishing and 100 for each yacht it beats. The third race of the series will be sailed next Sunday over a 15-mile triangular course.

Commodore Donald H. Sherwood's Ariel, third in the first race and second today, is second in points with 1,500.

George's Radio Juniors Seek New Title

Last Year's Midget Champs Are Bolstered With New Talent.

Stepping up one bracket, the George's Radio Juniors—last year's city Midget champions of The Post Sandlot Association—will go after the Junior title this season. Known last year as the Jack Pry Nats, the club won the National City title and beat Police Boys Club in the playoff for the city title.

Sunday, the Radio boys open their drive for the National City Junior championship with a line-up including many of the Jack Prys of last season. Manager F. H. Thompson has his Jack Pry captain, Joe Mahoney, on first, with Stan Heflin, of Alexandria Post, American Legion, ready as a reserve.

Leo Marshall, of the Wizard Locksmiths, and Bernard Korsover, of Alexandria Legion, are vying for the second base job, with Dick McHale and Bits Emment, of the Jack Brys, seeking the third base assignment. Joe Sullivan, of the Jack Prys, will play short.

The outfield will be chosen from Herb Lushby, of Alexandria Post; Jack Cummings, of Versis Food; Irving Nudle, of the Jack Prys, and Bob Russell, of the Petworth Nats. Wes Moore, who played with the Jack Prys last year and Washington-Lee High this season, will catch.

Walter (Lefty) Stockwell, of Eastern High, tops the pitching staff of Bob Anderson, of the Jack Prys of last season, and George Woods, of Alexandria Post. Manager Thompson led the Roy Spencers to the Times League title in 1931, the Eastern A. C. in 1932, the Virginia Bantams to the District League title in 1933 and the championship Jack Prys last year.

Perry Will Play Von Cramm In Finals

Boussus, Bernard Lose in French Hard Court Semifinals.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 31.—Fred Perry, England's famed tennis star, had to muster all his cunning and tennis art today to defeat Christian Boussus, first ranking French star, in the semi-finals of the French hard courts singles championship.

Perry, hard pressed all the way, eliminated the Frenchman, 6-4, 7-5, 5-7, 6-2, to join Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, of Germany, in the finals. The German baron easily defeated Marcel Bernard, of France, in straight sets, 7-5, 6-1, 6-1.

Reaching the finals of the women's singles were Mme. Simone Mathieu, of France, who vanquished Marie Louise Horn, Germany, 6-4, 6-4, and Mme Hilda Krahwinkel, of Denmark, who defeated Countess de la Valdene, of France, the former Lili de Alvarez, of Spain.

Baron Von Cramm never gave Bernard a real chance, taking a good lead at the outset, resting up as his rival squared the set and then applying the pressure to win at 7-5. In the last two sets, the German star gave the second ranking French star only 29 points—14 in the second and 15 in the third.

Mme. Sperling found Countess de la Valdene an easy victim. The Horn-Mathieu match was a different story. Miss Horn never gave up trying and every game was carried to deuce.

Berlin, May 31 (U.P.).—Erwin Casmir, head of the German Olympic fencing team, today announced officially that Helene Mayer, a Jewish girl, would be a member of the Nazi squad.

Favorites Win In City Tnnis Tourney

Buchanan Stages Lone Upset of Day, Beats Ritzenberg.

By George Considine.

With one exception favorites survived with steady regularity yesterday as the eighth annual City of Washington tennis tournament moved inot the quarter-final round in singles and the third round in doubles at the Edgemoor Club and Rock Creek.

It was the veteran Bill Buchanan who pulled the only real surprise of the day when he outlasted Nate Ritzenberg, local and Middle Atlantic junior champion, in a third-round marathon. The tell-tale scores were 4—6, 10—8, 10—8.

Ritzenberg vindicated his favored position in the draw by hitting with fine depth and power to walk off with the first set with something to spare despite the two-game margin. Buchanan was far from licked, however, as he matched the brilliant youngster drive for drive throughout the long second and third sets which were contested entirely from the baseline.

Barney Welsh, District champion, advanced to the quarter-finals by virtue of an easy victory over Capt. Stanley K. Robinson. Others to reach the round of eight without undue discomfort were Bud Markey, Tom Mangan and Tony Latona. Of these Mangan was given the best run before youthful Ray Stocklinski bowed, 6—1, 9—7.

In the feature match of the doubles division Hy Ritzenberg and Hugh Trigg drew many rounds of applause from the large gallery at the Edgemoor Club while disposing of Capt. Stanley Robinson and Allen Blade.

Follower of Fights Becomes Nautical

The second important thing I learned about this kind of boating is that you don't need any kind of license to operate them unless they are 65 feet, or more, in length. Very few of the nicer boats you see around these parts are more than 45 or 50 feet, so you can readily see that is no drawback.

Operating these things is, for the most part, very simple. Most of them drive just like an automobile excepting that some of them don't even have a clutch, which makes it that much easier. Steering them is a bit difficult at first. I tried—and at first left a trail like a bunch of pay-day footprints from a newspaper office. But one quickly masters the art.

Following a course in even a big boat is simpler than following a road map. There are no cross roads and there are buoys all the way almost anywhere you want to go. Where there are no buoys, one simply sets a course by a compass, then forgets about it until he runs smack into his destination. Another great advantage to yachting is that there are no Sunday drivers—even on Sunday.

About the only weakness yachtsmen seem to have is for flags. I learned that those gaudy banners which the Fifty-Fifty is flying from stem to stern are nothing more than alphabetical soup in bunting, each flag representing a letter in the international code.

It also has come to my knowledge that excellent food tastes even better on the water. I don't know how this will reach you, but whether it be by wire, radio or carrier pigeon, please be on the lookout for a boxing writer as I am now definitely determined to become a yachting editor.

Yours for seamanship, B. M.

P. S.—I have learned to tie a half-hitch in making fast to a dock (location undetermined, at present). From now on call me Commodore.

Financial and Business Review

Stock Trading In April Drops 20.9 Per Cent

But Volume for All U. S. Exchanges Is 83.1% Above Year Ago.

The dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in April amounted to $2,188,264,102, a decrease of 20.9 per cent from the value of sales in March and an increase of 83.1 per cent over the value of sales in April, 1935. Stock sales had a value of $1,936,372,916, a decrease of 20.3 per cent from March. Bond sales were valued at $251,878,089, a decrease of 25.1 per cent.

The share total of April's stock transactions was 77,916,327 shares, a decline of 23.6 per cent from the March figure. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $301,433,445, a decrease of 26.6 per cent from March.

The two leading New York exchanges accounted for 95.3 per cent of the value of sales on all registered exchanges; 94.8 per cent of stock sales and 99.7 per cent of bond sales.

The dollar value of sales on all exempt exchanges in April was $1,638,346, a decrease of 14.6 per cent from March.

Sales of stocks and bonds on the Washington Stock Exchange were $280,433 in April, compared with $230,248 in March.

Higher Prices Set For Steel Products

Cleveland, May 31.—More steel products have been advanced. In addition to the semi-finished materials, including blooms, billets, slabs and sheet bars, and steel bars and shapes, on which an increase of $2 a ton was announced a week ago, sheets, hot-rolled strip, sheet piling and hot-rolled alloy steel bars have been raised $2. Alloy steel ingots and semi-finished also are up, effective July 1. Some announcement on cold-rolled strip and rails is anticipated shortly. Steelmakers are following the "open price" plan they adopted several months ago, says the magazine Steel.

With all the adjustments so far made, effective July 1, Steel's index of finished steel prices would be $53.40, compared with $53.70 last March, when the net result of reductions in pipe and wire nails and an increase in plain wire was to reduce the index to $52.20. The lowest during the depression was $45.30 in the spring of 1933.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Fete 6,000 At Record Party

Event for Country Women Will Be Held Today on White House Lawn.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who has set a good many precedents with her entertainments since coming to the White House, will surpass all her past efforts this afternoon when she plays hostess to 6,000 women at a garden party.

This about five times the number ever entertained on the grounds of the Executive Mansion and almost lifts the affair out of the garden party class into the Easter egg-rolling category, when 40,000 persons have been known to stream through the White House gates.

When the First Lady planned today's entertainment she had no idea she'd have so many guests. She simply informed the directors of the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World that she would be happy to give a garden party for the delegates on the opening day of the convention.

At that time 1,000 women were expected to attend. But as soon as word of Mrs. Roosevelt's party got around, the acceptances began to pour in upon Miss Grace Frysinger, head of the convention committee.

Women who live as far away as California gathered up their egg money, tossed a few dresses into a bag, hopped on a bus or day coach, and started Eastward. It didn't take Miss Frysinger long to realize that Mrs. Roosevelt had started something.

The First Lady immediately made plans to entertain the entire 6,000. After all, it wouldn't be as bad as the time she expected 300 members of the National Chautauqua Women's Club for luncheon and then ended up by serving 850.

At that affair, a year ago last January, luncheon had been prepared for only the expected 300. When the additional 550 guests showed up a picnic menu, consisting of ham, potato salad, buns, pickles, coffee, ice cream and cake, was substituted. Paper napkins had to be pressed into service and the famous gold piano, covered with a heavy cloth, was used for a buffet.

None of those frantic, last-minute preparations will be necessary for today's party. The White House, through Miss Frysinger, has had sufficient time to order extra sandwiches, cakes, and ice cream. The only hardship will be that of the First Lady as she shakes hands with 6,000 guests.

The President is expected to appear in the garden, but will probably be prevented by official duties from greeting each of the women.

Gangsters Blamed In Chicago Blaze

Chicago, May 31 (AP).—Gang vengeance was blamed today for a fire that swept through the Paddock Club, North Side night spot, causing damage estimated at more than $2,000.

Police launched a search for two men said to have thrown five-gallon containers of gasoline and a torch into the night club entrance.

Held for questioning were Frank Howard, part owner of the club; Myer Epstein, 55, and Joe Cardomas, 37, the porters; Lawrence Katz, 33, and Max Moskowitz, 47, a tinsmith.

Epstein, father of Joseph Epstein, partner in the club, said two men broke open the front door while he and Cardomas were cleaning, tossed the cans into the foyer and then ignited the fluid with a torch.

The club owners blamed the "touch-off" on four gunmen who they said invaded the club several weeks ago and wrecked the place after one of them had been ejected.

Man Drowned in Bay As His Fiancee Watches

Snow Hill, Md., May 31 (AP).—The swinging boom of a sailboat, of which he was an occupant, struck Cletus Townsend, 30, of Salisbury, Md., and caused him to drown early today in Chincoteague Bay under the eyes of his fiancee.

Townsend and his fiancee, Miss Fay Lawson, 21, of Salisbury, had driven from Ocean City for a sailboat outing.

dent, there's never been anything to compare with this conference.

"Townswomen never have done anything like it," she said with a justifiable glow of pride.

For that matter country women have never done anything like it before, she added. The association has had two previous conferences, one in Vienna in 1930 and one in Stockholm in 1933. At neither of these did the attendance exceed 300.

But now more than 6,000 women, ranging from the ladies of English manors to the wives of tenant farmers, and representing 22 foreign countries as well as all sections of the United States, are gathered in Washington to discuss their common interest—life lived close to the soil.

Because of its international significance, the convention will be addressed briefly at its opening session by Secretary of State Hull. Greetings also will be extended by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will make the principal address. Mrs. Matt will respond, and then overseas delegates will bring greetings, speaking in their own languages.

The meeting will be adjourned at 3:30 p. m. for the gardenn party the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are giving at the White House. At 8 p. m. the session will be resumed with delegates from affiliated organizations abroad and in the United States presenting five-minute reports on work done since the last triennial conference.

The first day's activities will be closed with a film showing the activities of country women.

Yesterday was spent in registering, sightseeing and attending church. A vesper service was held around the Peace Cross at Washington Cathedral at 5 p. m.

Rural Women To Hear Appeal For 'New Deal'

Canadian Delegate to D. C. Session Will Ask World to Pay Its Debt.

A plea for a new deal for farm women throughout the world will be made here today by Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Canada and England as she addresses the opening session of the Associated Country Women of the World this afternoon in Constitution Hall.

According to Mrs. Watt:

"The world owes a very great deal to countrywomen, more proportionately than to any other single group, and we might now begin to pay back a little of that debt.

"We might be willing to pay fair prices for what the countrywomen offers for sale when she takes the trouble to make it cleaner and better. We might see that a fair proportion of the money spent on national education goes into the education she wants for her children.

"We might refrain from littering her home fields and roads and from destroying the trees and flowers and wild life she cherishes, remembering that we pass on, but she stays.

"We might see that adequate support is given to the great rural women's organization movement throughout the world, by means of which the country woman is educating herself and her community."

Dr. Gray Lauds American Way Of Democracy

A Path of Life as Well as Political Method, He Tells Graduates.

Democracy is a way of life, Dr. Joseph M. Gray, chancellor of American University, told graduating students yesterday in his baccalaureate sermon. Services were held at Metropolitan Memorial Episcopal Church adjacent to the campus.

"What has to be kept in mind amid the confusion and inadequacy of our social order is that democracy is not only a political method; it is a way of life," he declared.

"Its processes are inevitably slow. Dictatorships, whether of communism on the left or of Fascism on the right, need only a strong man and immediate action. They are manufactured products for which, given the material, no time is needed because they depend, not upon character, but upon force.

"But democracy is a growth, the sustaining energies of which flow from personal character. It is political, social and, also, personal evolution requiring ample epochs and no haste, and though its inadequacies are evident and its processes slow, it was a wise observer who said some time ago that "evolution is the only process which has yet produced a man."
